PPPC president Steve Burkholder presents Pork All-American plaque to Schuylkill Countian Lyndon Hepler.

Hepler named PPPC Pork All-American

BY JACK HUBLEY

HARRISBURG — Back in the 18th century, when Robert Burns penned the passage about "The best laid schemes o' mice an' men...", it's a safe bet that he had college freshmen in mind. While many aspiring collegians enter a four-year program with eyes riveted on the career of their dreams, they often find themselves choosing a different fork in the road along the way.

Take Lyndon Hepler, for instance. When this Schuylkill County farmer's son entered the Ag Mechanization program at Penn State in the mid-1970's, he had no intention of returning to the family farm in Pitman.

But when an adjoining farm came up for sale in his senior year, Hepler had to do some fast thinking. In the end, he chose the path that would lead to ownership of a 106-acre farm and a partnership with his father Raymond in the swine business.

This career move would also lead to his being named the Pork All-American for 1986. The 29-year-

PFA members interrogate gubernatorial candidates

BY SUZANNE KEENE

HARRISBURG — Three of the candidates for Pennsylvania governor fielded farmers' questions about the positions they would take on agricultural issues if elected during a "Meet the Candidates" meeting in Harrisburg Thursday night.

About 140 farmers attended the Pennsylvania Farmers Association-sponsored event, where the candidates each gave opening statements and answered written questions submitted by members of the audience.

In their brief opening statements the candidates — Bob Casey, a former auditor general from Lackawanna County; Buck Scott, a businessman from Montgomery County; and Lt. Gov. Bill Scranton, also from Lackawanna County — each voiced their support of Pennsylvania agriculture.

"I believe in the family farm," Casey said, noting that the answer to its survival lies in the land. If elected, Casey said he would sign a strong farmland preservation bill, support legislation returning control of marketing boards to farmers and, "put rural interests at the top of the list."

Scranton pledged to keep agriculture Pennsylvania's top industry. "Our farmers and our farmlands represent the very best resources we have. They must be protected and nurtured so they become an even greater factor in the state's economy, and through increased exports, in other economies."

Scranton listed among his priorities, farmland preservation, market development, and a reduced tax burden on farmers.

Scott said he would endorse legislation which would permit farmers to stay on the land and would guarantee that land values would remain secure for farmers forced out of the business.

He also strongly supported increased advertising of farm products. "I urge you not to lose sight of the importance of advertising and promotional efforts," he said.

In answering questions from the audience, the candidates each had two minutes to respond. Candidates were asked what measures they would take to curb the rate of farmland loss and to preserve the agricultural land base.

Both Casey and Scranton voiced support of Act 43, the Agricultural Area Security Law, which allows for development of "ag areas."

LF herd buyout survey:

Dairymen doubt buyout will work

BY MARTHA GEHRINGER AND JAMES H. EVERHART

LANCASTER — By about a five to one margin, dairymen participating in a Lancaster Farming survey say they don't think the federal government's new herd buyout plan will work.

As one participant put it, "Farmers will continue to produce more and more milk as always."

The unscientific poll of readers also yielded surprising support for production controls, including a quota system similar to those in use in other countries.

And only about 20 percent of those responding indicated that they intend to enter a bid on the program — and most of those admitted their bids will be quite high.

For the most part, respondents indicated that they thought the buyout program would not succeed because the production it diverts would be offset by increased output in remaining herds. Dairymen who want to remain in business, they said, will increase production to compensate for declining prices.

Many thought there will be too few participants in the program because of its complex rules and regulations, which were announced too close to the signup deadline to allow adequate consideration by serious operators.

And some said they thought the program was misguided, in that it will attract only marginal producers, or those who were planning to retire anyway.

Of those planning to submit a bid, many said they thought the dairy outlook is too uncertain to continue. Most mentioned the low profitability and the continuing burden of debt as an important reason to leave the industry; some noted that they were planning to quit anyway.

Of those who said they would not participate, most indicated they would not receive payment comparable to the value of their herds. They mentioned that they had worked years to build up a herd of top-quality cattle and hated to see those gains lost.

"I have been building a dairy herd since I was in high school," one respondent wrote, "and would not financially and mentally destroy them."

If chosen to participate in the program, dairymen who responded said they would get into beef production or hay and cash crops. Other options mentioned included hogs, poultry, berries, vegetables, horses, wood, syrup and Christmas trees. A few said they would rent or sell the farm, and others said they might plan to re-enter dairying in 1990.

Almost three-fourths of the respondents favored a quota system, resembling the one in place in Canada, to cut surpluses. Others indicated increased promotion and greater reliance on market to set supply and demand.

By a five to one margin, respondents expected that there would be a lot of cheating in the program, mostly in the area of trading cows around prior to the slaughter deadline.

As one participant put it,

To Be Aware of Alkaline Water for Pesticides

If your water is alkaline, especially if the pH is 8 or greater, you may have trouble getting good results from the pesticide spray material you are using on cropland. Water supplies in many areas have sufficient natural alkalinity to cause a "breakdown" of certain pesticides.

This means pest control may be somewhat less than desirable, or even non-existent, because the ingredient will be rendered inactive before it even reaches the plant or pest. If the spray is allowed to stand several hours before spraying, as much as 50 percent or more of the active ingredient may be decomposed.

Our Extension pesticide specialist tells us that pH in the range of 4 to 6 is recommended for most pesticide sprays. You can adjust spray solutions to this range by buffering agents. In general, the insecticides are affected more severely by alkaline water than fungicides or herbicides.

To Consider Topdressing Wheat

At this time, we are not certain how our wheat crop will survive the winter elements because we still have March to contend with. And March, with its freezing and thawing conditions, is one of the hardest months on wheat.

In any event, topdressing wheat with nitrogen will generally result in an extra 10 to 12 bushels per acre. This can result in extra profit to the grower.

The ideal time to topdress wheat is just when it begins to "green-up" in the spring. This will generally occur in the middle to latter part of March. However, wheat can successfully be top-dressed earlier in March when the ground is "honeycombed." Be cautious of highly fertile land that has received a lot of manure in the past. This kind of land does not need additional nitrogen.

Most wheat varieties can use between 40 and 50 pounds of nitrogen per acre. There are few activities around the farm that can return more profit, with less input, then topdressing wheat with nitrogen.

To Use Quality Seed

Many people are making plans for the 1986 growing season. In these plans, we should be preparing to use the very best quality seeds possible. Leftover seeds may be satisfactory if properly stored.

If they are certified or top quality seed to start with, it would be a good idea to run a germination test to be certain they will grow. This can be done with the old, but still effective, "Rag Doll" method (wrapping seeds in rolled-up moist rags or by placing seeds in a dish on wet paper towels, cover with plastic, and keep in a warm place for at least 10 days.) If these seeds do not grow under either of these tests, don't rely on them for your crop.

Certified seed may cost a little more in the beginning, but usually is worth the difference.

To Store Supplies Properly

Many farmers have purchased and accepted early delivery on seeds, fertilizers and other supplies. It is very important that these supplies are stored properly. I have seen bags of fertilizer stored too close to a barn door or an open window where the rain and snow blow in; also seeds in similar condition.

Extra moisture on these materials, or under them on a damp floor, can seriously affect quality. It's also very important to keep seeds away from weed killer chemicals. These herbicides may reduce or kill the germination of the seed. Be sure to store all farm chemicals out of reach of children, pets and livestock. All of these materials become more expensive each year so it's only good common sense to store them carefully.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

POWER

February 23, 1986

Background Scripture:
Mark 8:34-35; 9:33-37; 10:34-35.
Devotional Reading:
Hebrews 12: 1,2.

In the second-to-last decade of the 19th century, two men were born in Italian hill towns in the most humble of homes. One of these men enjoyed a meteoric rise in political power, becoming, perhaps, the most powerful Italian political leader since the days of the Roman emperors. The other became a Capuchin friar and spent practically his whole life in the obscure mountain village of San Giovanni Rotondo.

During the five decades during which these two men pursued their concurrent vocations, their courses led in two different directions. The one man, Benito Mussolini, became the absolute dictator of Italy and for 23 years he held the fate of millions of people in his hands. At the time of his ignoble execution, April 28, 1945, the other man, Francesco Forgione, known as Padre Pio, was just beginning to be known in Italy and elsewhere as "the Monk with the Wounds of Christ," a miracle healer and holy man.

TO BE GREAT

What a contrast between these two men. Benito Mussolini was an arrogant man who seized power and was prodigal in his use of it. Padre Pio, on the other hand, was a humble, unassuming man who took upon himself, the suffering of others. By our common cultural standards today, despite his fall, Mussolini was the epitome of power and Padre Pio the antithesis of it. Yet, today, most Italians want to forget the man they once hailed as "Il Duce" (the Leader), and thousands of people are making the pilgrimmage to San Giovanni Rotondo where Padre Pio lived most of his life and died.

In September we made our own pilgrimmage to San Giovanni Rotondo and found that, although Padre Pio died 17 years ago, his power continues to grow. While he was living, great throngs of people came to his town to see "the Monk with the Wounds." But, since his death, they still come and more than ever before–to experience his spiritual power. Father Joseph, an American who serves in San Giovanni Rotondo, told us: Padre Pio ever told a lie, but his death is in the greatest of all lies."

BEAR YOUR CROSS

There is no doubt in my mind which of these two men, Benito Mussolini or Padre Pio, was the most powerful. But niether do I have any illusions that my perception is shared by the world in which we live. Although Jesus demonstrated the true nature of power, we still haven't bought it. We still are pretty much where James and John were when they said to him, "Grant us to sit, one at your right hand and one at your left in your glory" (Mark 10:37). We still haven't accepted the answer he gave them: "...whoever would be great among you must be your servant and whoever would be first among you must be slave of all" (10:43,44). Nor have we yet accepted the true power in this world which is the power of the cross.

Why grow anything but the Best?

"I plant my 900 acres with W-L Alfalfa because it gives me tonnage and quality.
We've been planting WL since the early '70's, and we've had all their varieties as they've come along Right now, we're using the WL 316 heavily I like it best because it comes back quickly and stays fine When you're doing as many acres as I am, that leaf-to-stem ratio is important And we haven't had to spray for bugs, which says something about their pest resistance

Our customers want to see a good product, so I need a seed that will give me a good tonnage and high protein levels With WL, I believe I'm growing the best "

The Farmers' View

'Chemical Phobia' getting out of hand

A recent article in the New York Times stated that dangerous drugs, unapproved for use by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), "...are routinely fed to farm animals."

Such articles, using selective facts and assumptions will bear a direct relationship on the efficiency of future food production, development of new food products and higher food costs to the consumer.

"Chemical Phoebia is getting out of hand," said Dr. Elizabeth Whalen, Director of The American Council on Science and Health.

Dr. Whalen stated that the American food supply is the safest, most plentiful, varied and inexpensive in the world. In fact, like natural food supplies everywhere, it contains naturally occurring toxins and cancer-causing agents. "The human race has long been consuming naturally occurring toxins. When one understands the omnipresence of toxins and carcinogens in nature's own food supply, one can see the absurdity of panicking over minute levels of man-made chemicals," said Dr. Whalen.

Unfortunately the average consumer, who is becoming more and more concerned over health risks, reacts to food scares. For example, in 1978, a scientist from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology stated that nitrate, a food preservative in meat products, was carcinogenic. This study was later disproven and discredited, and in 1980 the USDA publicly acknowledged that the statements about nitrate use was not valid. When the nitrate scare happened, hog futures prices dropped dramatically. Pork producers were never compensated for these losses.

Farmers cannot afford this type of irresponsibility.

Now, a recent Congressional study has again stirred up the debate over the safety of drugs and feed supplements for livestock and poultry. And while FDA officials agree with some of the findings, Dr. Gerald Guest, of the Center for Veterinary Medicine of the FDA, was critical of the report stating, "This is a sweeping indictment. It's (sic) full of gross statements that just aren't accurate."

The report was especially critical of the unauthorized, and illegal drugs which they claim are used indiscriminately by producers. Such drugs remain in the animals far beyond the withdrawal periods of approved drugs. Additionally, the report indicated that many producers do not abide by mandated withdrawal periods. As a result, feed antibiotics, say critics, create antibiotic-resistant bacteria that can spread to humans. Such bacteria in theory, could make certain antibiotics ineffective in treating human disease. They also are alleged to cause a resistance to selective bacteria which can cause illnesses in humans.

This is a conclusion and an assumption which had never been proven by the scientific community. The University of California at Berkeley reviewed the claims in this allegation and said, "The main lesson from these findings is that food poisoning can result from contamination of meat followed by inadequate cooking."

Farmers have three major concerns in the controversy surrounding the sub-therapeutic use of antibiotics in animal feed. First, American producers have the enviable reputation of producing the most wholesome food products at the least cost to the consumer. We are, therefore, interested in any issue which will increase production costs or affect the quality of our products. Second, since we are exposed directly to livestock feed, we are concerned for our own immediate health and safety. Third, farmers are also consumers of red meats and poultry.

Feed antibiotics are under attack, the strongest yet. The controversy will not go away. Pennsylvania Farmers' Association policy states: "That use of antibiotics, feed additives and hormones which are essential to efficient modern day production of high quality animal products be continued where necessary safeguards are employed by producers to eliminate harmful residues, and oppose proposals to ban use of such materials in livestock and poultry production."

All farmers need to be aware of the controversy...and, all farmers need to make a commitment to follow practices which will not add to the controversy.

The Farmers' View is a column that is compiled by the Public Relations Division of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA). It expresses the views of PFA's policy positions on key issues as adopted by the organization's 23,313 family members.

DK656.
Strong start. Strong stand. Great finish.

Spring. So full of promise. You want to do everything right. Leave as little to chance as possible. That's why you plant DK 656. From the day you put this corn hybrid in the ground, you know you can start counting the days to a great harvest.

DK 656 is the new tradition that "out-stood" a lot of "old standards" around here last fall. It comes up quick as a spring storm. Stands up all the way to harvest and dries down fast.

Make what choices you have to this spring. But put your DK 656 in the ground. And start counting the days to a great harvest.

Heifer raising - a new angle, synchronization and tie stalls

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

EAST BERLIN – Call it what you like: mass mating, timed insemination, breeding by appointment. Whatever the label, a breeding technology developed for the beef industry can be a positive dairy management tool, given the right set of circumstances.

At least that's the way the Rodman Thompson family sees it.

The Thompsons operate a 62-head milking herd on East Berlin Road, near the western York County border. This has been home for Jane, Rod and their children since May of 1959, when they moved their 26 milking registered Holsteins away from development pressures in Bucks County.

The farm they had been renting there belonged to the Duchess of Luxembourg. Core Creek flowed just fifty yards away in the valley, spawning the name Core-Dale, etched in a giant stone in the barn, for the farm. Thompsons had kept their Holsteins in the barn that had originally housed a Guernsey herd. But post-war urban sprawl, in the form of Levitown, was encroaching on the area's farmland, and eventually the Duchess' estate went underwater. Today, this farm lies under the lake of the Core Creek Recreational Park.

After farming for about twenty years in York County, Thompsons had the opportunity to expand acreage with the purchase of an adjoining property. They were somewhat crowded for heifer facilities, and the tie-stall barn that came with the purchase offered adaptable heifer housing.

Oldest son, Rod, Jr., was milking his own string of cows, daughter Shirley and her husband Larry Trimmer were raising their family in a new home between the two farms and Roy, the youngest, planned to join the family business after high school graduation.

Along with raisng her own family, Shirley had maintained an intense interest in the family herd. She opted to take charge of the calf and heifer raising end of the dairy operation at teh second barn, with Larry lending a hand as needed in his time at home away from his off-farm job.

But a move of Rod, Jr.'s milking herd into the second tie-stall barn and a burst of heifers from the Core-Dale coincided to stretch the freestall-type facilities to the seams at the home farm's heifer pole barn.

"That was creating a crowded condition and they weren't where they could be as easily watched; I couldn't spend as much time observing them as I wanted to," Shirley relates.

When they ran across an article on heifer estrus synchronization, in a Select Sire publication, the Thompsons were initially skeptical of the idea. They related the idea to their local Atlantic technician, Charlie Greist, who encouraged the family to investigate the technique a bit further.

After a bit more education on the method through a representative from the CEVA Laboratories, originators of the Syncro-Mate-B technique, Thompsons decided they liked what they were hearing: animals could be at any stage of their estrus cycle; they could be easily be timed to freshen for the critical milk-base setting period; plans could be arranged well ahead of time for the day's extra help that would be needed for the implanting; all calvings should also fall within a reasonably short length of time.

Shirley is quick to emphasize one point: "This heifer management tool; it suited our needs at a particular time."

That need was ten heifers inching past the Thompson preferred breeding weight and age. They aim to breed heifers at 17 months and freshen no later than 27 to 30 months, earlier with exceptionally large, growthy individuals.

On hand for the first implant procedure were not only the CEVa rep, but breeding technician Greist, and plenty of family hands to round up, corral and lend assistance. While it required perhaps a few extra hours of labor at the time, Thompsons still see the method as time-effective, compacting the work load into a few hours, rather than individual heifer chasing for endless days.

Catch chute, clippers disinfecting solution and brush and sterile syringes were among the list of supplies on hand to make the implanting work smoothly.

Cleanliness is emphasized from beginning to end - even the recommendation to use fly control sprays if the implanting takes place during fly-prone weather

The implant resembles about a three-fourth-inch piece of clear plastic breeding rod, with a clear yellow insert in the center - the synchronizing hormone progestin Using a special syringe-like tool, the implant is inserted just under the skin in a clipped, sterilized area on the back of the heifer's ear. The slight bump of the implant can be felt when it is properly in place.

Insertion of the implant was followed with a two c.c. injection of a hormone mix of additional progestin and estrogen.

Nine days later, the implant was removed. Hormones were dissolved, the tiny capsule outer shell had softened, and could easily be removed from beneath the skin. Within 48 to 54 hours, the Thompsons were to expect the first signs of heat. "We actually started to observe signs of heat even a little earlier than that," according to Shirley.

In the interim, matings had been carefully selected, and the coinciding heats even allowed for splitting of semen units Rod, Roy and technician Greist all assisted with the insemination procedures

Five of the ten heifers settled on the first service. The remaining five all conceived on the second service.

All calved normally, within time spans of five days of the due date None lost a fetus, and six of the ten had heifer calves

"But we still prefer to breed on natural service," Shirley emphasizes again "This is a management tool If we needed to, we'd synchronize again. It offers the genetic advantage of selecting proven A.I. sires for heifers, rather than breeding them to a barnyard bull."

Use of that tool at Core-Dale hasn't been necessary, however The second stall barn is again availalbe for heifer raising, and the Thompson family is sold on the benefits of tie-stall care for yearling and bred heifers.

Tied each day in the stalls, heifers become familiar with the routine. After morning feedings of corn silage, clover-timothy hay and fifteen-percent protein grain mix, they're turned out for pasture exercise, and to facilitate stall cleanup.

"Tie stall care allows for more individual attention, better health care, feeding according to weight and need," says Shirley. An added bonus is that when they freshen, they're accustomed to coming into stalls and being tied." And, with Chad and Amy Trimmer often in the barn while their mother works with the young stock, these hiefers soon become used to voices, toys, and people moving among them

Estrus cycles are charted on the heifers starting at 14 months of age, with heat detectors put on individuals scheduled to display heat signs. Monthly herd checks keep track of individuals to watch and conception successes, flagging silent heats and reproductive problems before they become critical

The extra care being paid to replacements is already paying off.

"Our two-year-olds are averaging two thousand pounds more now than our heifers used to in their first lactation," affirms Jane. A few of the most recently fresh heifers put on DHIA testing are milking over 80 pounds daily, with none below 65-pounds-per-day production.

Thompsons see this as a step toward their long range goal of both improved genetics and increased individual production. Long-term goal at Core-Dale, says Jane, is to up their present 62-head average of 16,300 and 600 fat to the 20,000-pound area on 50 head, to provide a desired income level for the families involved.

Headed for the March 28 Pennsylvania On Parade Holstein sale at Harrisburgh is a growthy two-year-old, due to freshen this week Sired by Mars Tony, she's from a herd favorite, a Very Good, 22,000-pound Conductor daughter of the noted Cold-Springs Star Codee cow, an EX-92-2E Ivanhoe Star bred and developed by Marylander Marlin Hoff

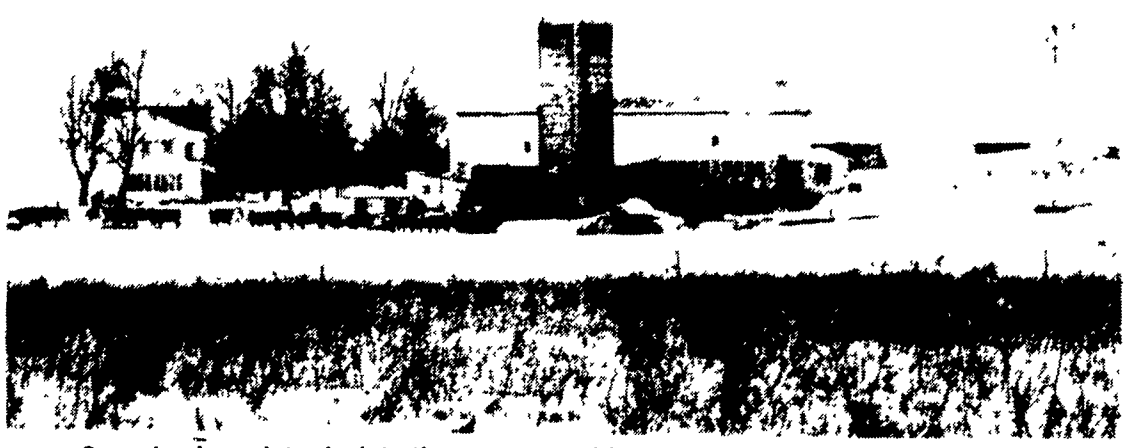
Cold Springs Tony Delight accepts a hay handout from Chad and Amy Trimmer. The two-year-old will freshen shortly and sell at the young cow and bred heifer sale of the Pennsylvania on Parade extravaganza the last week of March.

Rod Thompson and daughter Shirley Trimmer demonstrate the method of inserting estrus synchronization hormone implants in heifers. Implant goes in the back of the ear.



Snow lends a wintry look to the pasture and farmstead at the Rod Thompson family's Core-Dale farms.

BY BARBARA MILLER
Staff Correspondent

JERMYN — Vowing that "I would do it again," George Sheypuk of Shey-land Holsteins in Lackawanna County, explained the evolution of his embryo transplant operation. They are now collecting from excellent cows with records over 24,000 pound of milk.

In 1982 George and Paul Sheypuk again led the state in dairy production with 23,511 pounds of milk and 881 pounds of fat. One year later the brothers sold their herd, except for young stock, and "vacationed" for a short time.

Then with occasional selective additions from outside their herd, they began rebuilding their operation in 1984. This time the focus was placed on selling embryos from a few top individuals.

The Sheypuks have been very successful in their new venture. Last year they exported or implanted approximately 200 embryos from a few top individuals.

Walebe Christe ET, a Bell daughter out of Quietcove Matt Cinderella, is the Sheypuks' highest index cow. This index is currently 1736M, .09%, 80F and $235. She classified VG 86 as a two year and had a record of 24,968M, 1090F with a 4.4 percent test in 313 days.

George says he is even prouder of their second highest index cow, Shey-land Valiant Athene, because she is homegrown. Her index stands at 1307M, .16%, 76F and $203. Born January 5, 1982, Athene classified EX 90 as a junior three-year-old.

Paul and his wife, Diane stand in front of the barn that houses their prize animals.

She is currently working on a record as a three-year-old of 26,473M, 1253F with a 4.7 percent test. Athene's dam is Shey-land Elevation Allure who classified EX 91.

A good cow index is important to George. "Maybe you're not cow index oriented," he says, "but it's today's market." Although he's aware of changes now to pounds of protein and butterfat, George says farmers will have to work at what the market demands.

They began flushing cows two years prior to the sale, according to George, and decided to become serious about selling embryos because, "It was the wave of the future."

Paul, however, is a bit more cautious, and is still reserving judgement on the changeover. "I don't know yet," he says, "I'll know better in a couple years."

George and Paul started farming 30 years ago at ages 15 and 13 respectively. The youngest of five children, they eventually purchased the farm from their father. Through hard work, they expanded and improved the herd until it became one of the highest producing in the state.

The work is divided so that George represents the farm at sales, conventions and in farm groups while Paul stays home and takes care of things.

According to George, Parkmont Glendell Joell, the first cow they purchased after their sale, has given them the highest number of embryos. To date they have obtained 125 embryos from Joell whose index is 911M, .46 $136 with a 51 percent repeatability. She classified EX 91 2E and has a record in 365 days of 27,130M, 1133F with a 4.2 percent test.

The majority of their embryos, George says, are surgically implanted. With surgical implantation, George says he can benefit from an extra calf but, he adds, nonsurgical implants are cheaper.

To aid in selecting bulls the Sheypuks use the Holstein Association's Red Book as a guide. At present they are using Rotate, Mark and Ned Boy, but George's favorite is Rotate.

"Rotate is on top of the heap. He's a high milk and test bull...we have good luck in conception with Rotate," he commented.

...anting to success with high index cows

With Rotate embryos they have had 20 to 30 pregnancies and one flush from a donor cow resulted in 19 good Rotate embryos. "We were quite happy that day," George remembered with a smile.

Ned Boy's offspring, George notes, stands out for its pleasing rump, open ribbing, strongly attached fore udder and walks on a good set of feet and legs.

Occasionally, according to George, he will gamble on a young upcoming bull such as Bachelor because, "We can't breed to high ones all the time — we'll go broke."

They feed the same rations now as they did with their original herd, George says. No cow is fed more than 30 pounds per day of a balanced grain ration made according to Penn State specifications. The grain ration and corn silage are fed three times daily in addition to 12 pounds of hay per cow in the evening.

To aid in calving and as a ketosis preventative, the Sheypuks routinely inject cows two weeks before calving with Mu-se selenium. George reports there have been very few cases of ketosis in their herd with this routine.

Having enough recipients, George says, is their biggest problem. "It's really hard to find enough recipients," he noted.

George Sheypuk stands with Walebe Christe E.T., the highest index cow at Sheyland. Her index is 1736M, .09%, 80F and $235 and she was classified at VG86.

This problem was resolved with a solution that is as satisfying to the Sheypuks as to neighboring farmers. "We rent recipients from neighbors and pay a flat fee," George explained. "They keep the cows and we don't have to feed a large recipient herd."

A farmer receives payment equal to the worth of a calf, George pointed out. Presently, they have about 50 ongoing pregnancies.

Most of the Sheypuks' embryos are marketed through American markets in Virginia where they are sent to France, West Germany and Denmark. None are marketed within the United States. George sees little logic in competing against his own operation. Bulls are currently being sold to Japan and China.

George and his wife, Dee, find the shift to selling embryos agreeable for various reasons. "I think it's a lot more fun and interesting with buyers coming from other countries," George observes.

But George and Dee seem to have trouble agreeing whether or not they have more free time since the sellout. George says although they have fewer cows (50 as opposed to their previous 72 to 75), he feels they're about as busy either way. He says there is more paperwork now with calves, studs and bull going to testing.

Dee notes that the stress now is more mental than physical, but she affirms and appreciates the fact that they are able to do more things as a family now.

Perhaps there is a little more time, she says, because George and Paul have reached a levelling off phase in their expansion efforts on the farm. George explained that they plan to keep their herd at 50 cows and Dee added that there currently are no plans for building additions.

Dee, who keeps the books, also observes that now, "The milk pays the bills and the (money earned from) ET's is extra."

Then there is the matter of greater public recognition. Although George denies it by a vigorous shaking of his head, Dee insists he enjoys the extra recognition he receives now as a Sheypuk who sells embryos. When someone approaches him at a function and asks about his herd, his eyes light up, she noted.

George did say he would do it all again.

MERIDIAN — The brother and sister team of Gary and Julie Wible were honored as outstanding boy and girl, at the annual meeting of the Butler County Holstein Club held recently at the Meredian U P Church, Meredian, PA.

Gary, 15, and Julie, 13, are the children of Curt and Colleen Wible, Butler. They were selected for these awards based on their junior Holstein project work.

Gary is a member of the Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Association and has been active for the past seven year in the Butler County 4-H Dairy Club. Gary currently owns 11 Holsteins while his sister Julie owns seven.

Julie is also a junior member of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association and a 4-H member in both the Butler County Dairy Club and the Lucky Clovers Sewing Club.

Gary and Julie were further honored during the banquet receiving milk production awards. Gary took home the top award for the aged-cow class with a record of 24533 M and 818 F. Julie meanwhile received second place in the three-year-old fat division with a record of 565 F.

The youth portion of the banquet continued with the announcement other production awards. Jeffery Hixon won the three-year-old class with a 21780 M and 757 F production. Lona Rader placed second in the aged-cow class producing 20534 M and 797 F.

Harold Rader Jr. topped the four-year-old class with a record of 21398 M and 721 F. He also took top honors in the junior two-year-old milk category with the production record of 14301 M.

Jean Kummer was first in the junior two-year-old class fat division with a record of 474 F. Coming in second in this category for both fat and milk was Lona Rader with the record of 13679 M and 469 F.

The youth portion of the banquet concluded with a report from each junior member on last year's accomplishments. At this time it was announced that Lona Rader is a state finalist for Distinguished Junior Member of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

Director George Cudoc explained a pamphlet that will be given out at the state convention which describes the Butler County Holstein Club with a brief history and a listing of their yearly activities.

This pamphlet also includes a map showing the location of the club's members. This project was done this year since the convention is being held at the western end of the state and will provide convention goers with an introduction to the club.

Ken Raney from the Pennsylvania Holstein Association informed the group on the activities that will be coming up on a state wide level.

Robert Rugaber, Butler county agent, concluded the meeting wi a discussion on the herd buyo program and urged anyone wi questions concerning the progra to contact the ASCS office or t county extension office.

Jersey Club develops computerized mating program

COLUMBUS, OHIO — Effective January, 1986, Jersey breeders across the country have access to a unique computerized mating program developed and provided by The American Jersey Cattle Club (AJCC).

Jersey breeders now have a program available to help them make maximum genetic progress, while conserving much of their own time. The Jersey Mating Program (JMP) is a breakthrough in the science of selective dairy cattle breeding, with several unique features.

Selected matings are made with the goal of maximizing net income per day of production life for the entire Jersey herd. Exhaustive scientific research has been used to establish values for the various traits considered in the matings.

The program makes use of each sire's Predicted Difference for all production and type traits, as well as each cow's Cow Index for these same traits. Extensive scientific research has shown that by using these genetic evaluations, the average performance of groups of offspring will be most accurately predicted.

JMP also takes into account the reduction of milk, fat and protein yield due to the effects of inbreeding. The program considers the 30 nearest ancestors to determine the level of inbreeding.

In helping Jersey breeders to select which bulls may be used in their herds, JMP considers all active AI bulls or any non-AI bulls the breeder may want to use. Selection is not limited to any one specific bull stud.

For use in determining which active AI sires to select, the MAXBULL program, developed by Virginia Cooperative Extension, has been made available through a cooperative agreement. Proven sires are selected based on criteria established by each breeder, including the milk market, semen price and specific type traits.

Herds enrolled on the AJCC's Total Performance Evaluation (TPE) program can have their cows mated with JMP for just $1.00 per cow. Herds enrolled on the Special Type Evaluation Program (STEP) and herds on DHIR test can mate their cows with JMP for just $1.25 per cow. All other herds must pay $2.00 per cow. All herds must pay a $15.00 herd fee.

For additional information about this program, contact The American Jersey Cattle Club, Columbus, OH 43227-0310, (614) 861-3636.

Vista Grande Holsteins -- doing a better job

BY ROBIN PHILLIPS
Staff Correspondent

FLEETWOOD — Efficient and progressive dairymen, committed to their profession are needed across the country with the dairy economy so uncertain. Vista Grande Holsteins, owned by Joseph Ruth and David Bitler, Berks County, illustrate what can be accomplished through sound decisions and careful management.

Young dairymen with a good start in farming, Ruth and Bitler try to be optimistic about the future. "You're always going to need milk," Bitler states. Joe Ruth admits, "It doesn't look like dairying is going to be too prosperous for the next few years."

But, Ruth is quick to point out, "hard work" is a vital part of their formula for success. "We rely on common sense more than anything else," he says. As for dealing with the future, Ruth adds, "We won't increase anything,...and won't spend money unless we have to." Bitler adds, "We'll just try to do a better job."

A "better job" could be the motto at Vista Grande Farm where a 90 cow registered Holstein herd has been managed by the Ruth-Bitler partnership since 1979.

The very beginnings of the current Vista Grande spread started in 1937 when Alpheus Ruth, current president of Lehigh Valley Farmers, established his registered Holstein herd on the Fleetwood farm. The entire herd, with the exception of a few animals bought by Dave and Phoebe Ruth, can be traced to one cow, Greenwood Dean Bobby of Dunloogin breeding.

This cow had seven sets of twins. Six of the sets were twin heifers, and formed the foundation of the current herd. Years later, in 1975, a partnership was formed between Ruth and his son Joseph.

Management of the 163 acre homestead changed again in 1979. Phoebe, Ruth's daughter, and her husband, David Bitler, sold their dairy herd in Lancaster County to take up the partnership with Joseph after the elder Ruth retired from farming.

Today over 300 acres are farmed by the Ruth-Bitler family team, and 80 plus cows are milked in a spacious stanchion barn. Although Bitler manages the dairy herd and Ruth oversees crop management, duties are shared and only seasonal employees are needed.

Two people complete the milking duties using six milking units on a pipeline system. Most crop production and harvesting is also done by the team with a minimum of custom work hired.

The rolling herd average has been increasing yearly and currently stands at 19,043M, 780F and 3.7 percent on 93 cows. "I spend more time with the cows," Bitler confesses, but contributes the biggest asset as the ability to grow better replacement heifers.

The work force behind the successful operation of Vista Grande Holsteins stand around the farm sign. The two family partnerships include: on left, Joseph Ruth and his wife, Joanne, and children, Krista, and Kent. On the right stand David Bitler, and wife, Phoebe, with son, Jesse.

Jesse helps to keep things clean at Vista Grande.

Phoebe Bitler has complete care of the calves at Vista Grande. Much of her success she attributes to being the only calf feeder all the time.

"Raising heifers better, giving them a better chance,...I contribute that as one of the biggest benefits for the herd," Bitler reiterates. "I don't know what we did before we had the VPI barn," he adds, as he explains the grouping method on the farm. Built in 1981, the VPI barn has proved a valuable tool for raising replacement stock.

Calves are started in hutches, weaned at eight weeks, then moved to super hutches in same-size groups. As the growth rate improves, heifers are grouped in the VPI barn. At ten months to one year of age, or equal size, heifers are moved to a freestall barn to await breeding and entering the milking string.

In complete charge of the calves, Phoebe Bitler states that much of her calf raising success stems from "the same person feeding calves all the time." Calves are watched closely, fed antibiotic milk or milk replacer, and weaned and grouped as growth dictates.

Calfhood vaccinations and wormings are also part of the calf program. Calves are bucket fed milk to discourage sucking and amply bedded with straw at all times.

A total mixed ration is used throughout the barns for the stock. Bitler relates that he just changed the feeding program for the milking string to feed for a high producing group and a low producing group. "Now I feed for a 50 pound cow and 75 pound cow," he explains.

Production is climbing since the TMR milking ration was adjusted and was proven by the last DHIA test when 15 cows produced over 100 pounds of milk a day.

The milking string is fed the TMR twice a day along with a top dress supplement and dry hay at night. High moisture shelled corn, roasted crimped soybeans, alfalfa haylage, and corn silage form the basis of the ration.

Separate rations are formulated by Bitler for the dry cow group and the young stock group. These rations are then fed accordingly. Dry cows receive hay, free choice, and a grain mix concentrated with oats in addition to corn silage. Bitler also custom mixes his own calf grower.

Feeding roasted soybeans in the ration is "one of the best things we've done," according to Bitler. It has saved a lot of feed costs for the partnership and also gave them a big fertilizer advantage by putting nitrogen back in the ground, Ruth states. Ruth rotates corn and soybeans to gain this advantage.

Dave Bitler stands by Pen-Col Apollo Bethany, a cow developed at Vista Grande. An 85 point Hilltop Apollo, Bethany milked over 150 pounds on the last test, making it her third test since freshening of over 100 pounds. She has a record of 20,000+ pounds milk with a 4% test to her credit at five years and nine months of age.

Crop management at Vista Grande involves rotating crops and growing what is needed for the dairy herd and young stock. Not necessarily pushing for the top crop production because of the added costs involved.

Ruth explains that he plant according to what is practical and efficient for the farm. "I don't believe in borrowing money to put a crop out," he states. He explains that there are always alternative ways to grow what the farm needs without going into debt to gain the biggest harvest.

Corn, alfalfa, and soybeans are the main crops on the 380 acres of owned and rented farmland. Oats and wheat are also grown and rotated to save on fertilizer costs.

Forage quality has also been increasing over the years due to Ruth's crop management, according to Bitler. With this type of careful managment, Vista Grande cows are pumping out noteworthy records. On the last test, a two year old Chairman daughter recorded 92 pounds.

The partnership is also proud of Pen-Col Apollo Bethany, an 85 point Hilltop Apollo daughter who just tested 151.5 pounds. "Bethany", a six year old, was purchased as a young animal and developed at Vista Grande.

She boasts a five year old record of 28,387M, 1149F and 4.0 percent. She has also produced a Valient daughter who is sparking outside interest with her two year record of 20,000 plus and a 4.5 percent test. "Valient Buffy" is due in March to Bova.

"I try to be mindful of test whenever practical," he states. Classification, AAA, and common sense are incorporated as tools in Bitler's management of the dairy herd. "I try to come up with something I like to milk," he concludes.

Vista Grande Holsteins has many such individual. Among them is "Selina", an 83 point Pacemaker with 4-03, 365d, 35,041M, 3.6 percent, 1267F. There is also Vista Grande Star Lass, an excellent four year old with 3-08, 365d, 24,202M, 4.2 percent, and 1024F.

"Astro Pansy", and 85 point, five year old boast a 4-04, 365d, 30,713M, and 1023F record. Even the smaller, but very typey "Sun Eloise," a VG-87 pumped out 4-03, 317d, 24,911M, 3.7 percent, and 917F.

It is obvious that the two families take pride in their farm. The beautiful landscaping and grounds work is maintained by Joanne, Joseph Ruth's wife, who also works part time as a nurse. The lined up, painted calf hutches blend with the handy set up of the matching barns along with stone barnyard walls and rail fencing to design a lovely farm.

The partnership is active in the Berks County Holstein Club and DHIA. This year their plans include increasing the showing of Vista Grande animals at local and state shows. As for the long term plans of Vista Grande, Bitler sums it all up with, "I enjoy working with the cows, that's all I consider."

The feed room is well organized and efficient at Vista Grande. Dave stands by his mixer and scale with his son Jesse. Feed is formulated and mixed daily. Cows are fed four times a day, and Bitler formulates a custom ration for each stage of growth of young stock.

Good management key to survival

LITITZ — The farmer who is a good manager will be the one to survive for the next five years. This was the message that Larry Jenkins delivered, Associate Professor Farm Management Penn-State University, at the annual McCracken's Feed Mill Professional Dairyman's Seminar, held Tuesday.

A farmer that has a large debt can still survive providing he is a good manager, Jenkins went on to explain. He suggested the group check the actual costs of producing milk on their farms to make sure production was efficient as possible.

One common misconception is the high producing herds are the ones that are making the most net income, Jenkins pointed out. In reality, income does increase as production increases to a point. At this point net income then decreases as production rises.

Jenkins listed the measures of a good management program. The key point of this list was growing and feeding quality forages on the farm. This lowers feed costs and aids in animal health and production.

Other points which Jenkins explained are part of a good management program include: testing the forages and balancing rations based on this test, using a good record keeping program such as DHIA, breeding with superior A.I. bulls and culling animals with a standard system.

Also falling under the classification of good management practices, Jenkins stated, are the following items: practicing good sanitation in milking and waste management, checking milking equipment annually, and creating goals for milk production, farm income and cow numbers for the next ten years.

Jenkins concluded by profiling what a surviving farm will have achieved by the year 1990. Machinery costs on this farm will be $400 per cow or less. It will be selling over 400 thousand pounds of milk per worker and purchased feed costs will amount to less than 30 percent of milk sales.

Plant Birka Barley this spring... The profitable alternative to oats.

Many growers are convinced — and comparison tests prove them right — that spring barley is the sensible alternative to oats especially when it's the new Birka Barley Birka outperforms oats in yield and test weight, and has excellent standability It has been the top New York grown barley in Cornell trials for three years in a row, and provides the dependability that oats often does not

For The Dairyman — Birka Barley is more than a good nurse crop, so often the primary function of oats Birka is an excellent dairy feed — higher in energy and TDN than oats, comparable in protein and palatability, and excellent for standability — even when extra nitrogen is used Birka fits well into a summer feeding and cropping program because it is ready for combining far ahead of corn harvest

For The Cash Cropper — Birka has more advantages than its high yield, test weight, and excellent resistance to lodging Two-rowed Birka is a good harvester Its plump kernels head out well and do not fall to the ground before combining There is generally an immediate favorable price market for barley unlike oats, which may have to be stored to await best price, and barley fills that long period before corn harvest Also, Birka's stiff, sturdy straw makes it a good seller at the race tracks and other profitable markets

PFA members examine candidates

However, the funds necessary to make this system work have not been available in the past, and both candidates support legislation introduced by Sam Morris that would make funding possible.

Scranton added: "If we're going to preserve farmland, we have to preserve farms." To do this, he suggests finding ways to help farmers and agribusinesses cut costs, and promoting a statewide marketing program.

Scott said the new governor will have to stand up to developers, noting, "I would...lean in that direction."

Farmers also queried the candidates on what they would do to reform the state's local real estate tax, which the farmers think is disproportionately placed on landowners.

All three candidates agreed that the tax system should be overhauled to distribute the tax burden more evenly. Scranton called for property tax reform and more income-based taxes.

Scott agreed that the tax burden should be moved to income, noting that he would advocate a slight increase in the state income tax.

Casey also said he would "move in the direction of smoothing out the burden at the local level."

In selecting a secretary of agriculture, Casey said he would search for a strong-willed, well-informed advocate of agriculture. "The secretary of agriculture will be from you and of you," he promised.

Scranton said he, too, would seek "someone who is clearly an advocate of agriculture." That person would be someone in the administration who knows farming from the grassroots level and who would help build agriculture in Pennsylvania

If elected, Scott said he would "allow that person (the secretary of ag) to exercise a considerable amount of independent judgement."

When questioned about their support of legislation placing a mandatory deposit on bottles and cans, none of the candidates were willing to give their firm support. Scranton came closest to supporting this legislation, saying he is willing to seek a solution to the litter problem. He would not, however, promise to sign legislation calling for a mandatory deposit.

Casey said he definitely would not sign such a bill because of the other interests involved in the issue

Scott would also refuse such legislation. Instead, he sees advertising and promotion of anti-litter sentiment as an effective solution.

The candidates were asked what emphasis they would place on animal health programs. Scranton and Casey both said they strongly emphasize such programs and would provide adequate state funding for them. "Adequate state funding is basic and vital to this program," Casey said. Both stressed the importance of preventing and treating diseases like avian flu.

Scott said he is "favorably inclined" to animal health and that he would back increased work in that area.

When questioned about funding for the Department of Agriculture, Casey said he believes the scope of problems in rural America extends beyond the farm to include medical and educational concern, and that "should be reflected in a substantial Department of

"Farmers are an ingenious group and have a share of cheats and liars."

Overall, almost half of those participating in the survey said they thought milk production will increase this year, by anywhere from one to 20 percent. One out of four thought it would remain the same and only about one in five thought it would drop. The rest expect output to drop for a time and then increase slowly.

Results of the informal survey will be forwarded to the appropriate authorities at PDA and USDA, although identities of the respondents, where apparent, will remain confidential.

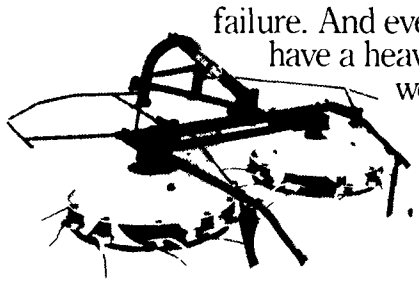
The tremendous response to the survey request drew participants from throughout Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and New York, and from areas of Massachusetts and Connecticut as well.

THE VICON SYSTEM. MAKE IT WORK FOR YOU.

Sometimes it seems we spend half our lives fighting the system. But there's one system that's always on your side—the Vicon Haying System.

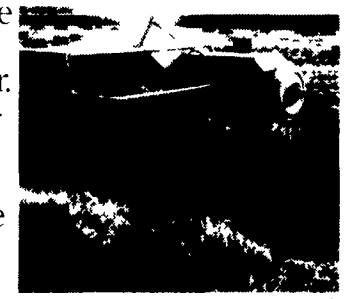
With a Vicon KM Mower/Conditioner, one of our heavy-duty hay rakes or tedders, and a new Vicon Square Baler, you can make hay faster, better and more economically.

The KM321, for instance, is the fastest mower/conditioner in the world. It's 30 percent faster than conventional mower/conditioners. A new drive unit lets you operate non-stop. Take square corners without drive line vibration or danger of failure. And even if you have a heavy, dew-wet crop, the KM 321 won't plug, and won't leave you worrying about leaf loss.



The Vicon line of tedder/rakes are just as efficient in their own right. They're versatile, ideal for short crops and economical, too. They rake or tedd quickly and cleanly. Available in two working widths to fit any farm. With easy tine replacement. And best of all, Vicon tedder/rakes are gentle on your crop.

Last but not least, you'll find that Vicon SP Square Balers give you the convenient range of bale sizes and weights to meet your haying needs. All have a combination auger/feeder fork which moves the crop evenly into the full width of the bale chamber. So you get consistent bales of even density, time after time. The Vicon is also available with a hydraulic bale thrower.



For more information on Vicon Haying Systems, or the name of your closest Vicon dealer, just call or write. We think you'll see that when you can't beat the system, there's only one thing left for a grower to do.

Manure systems have to be built properly

BY MONTIE TAK
Special Correspondent

CHAMBERSBURG — "Whatever you build, do a quality job," says William J. Bowers.

An agricultural engineer from the Soil Conservation Service, Bowers was addressing a capacity audience attending the Regional Manure Conference on February 4 in Chambersburg. He spoke or sizing, site selection, construction and maintenance techniques for storing manure.

The Chambersburg conference was the first of four given in a "traveling road show" format in Pennsylvania. Conferences on subsequent days were scheduled for East Brandywine, Bethlehem and Lewisburg in a collaboration between the Soil Conservation Service and Penn State University.

If you had previously thought of manure management in terms of a pitchfork and shovel, one of these conferences was the place to be. Agricultural engineers and agronomists discussed storage and handling systems, compared costs and nutrient retention of manure systems and use of manure for crop production.

Bowers says good manure management is important for a number of reasons. "Manure storage helps to make maximum use of nutrients. The big item is nitrogen. If you put it out in the fields in January, very little nitrogen will be left by June."

He adds manure handling is a system and if it is not properly utilized, farmers may unwittingly cause pollution and incur possible involvement by the Department of Environmental Resources.

Bowers enumerated the reasons for wanting to store manure. The first is the convenience of spreading manure when weather and scheduling allows. Then, with increasing fertilizer prices, "We have a real resource here and we need to take advantage of it." Thirdly, he says, "A nutrient not in the right place can become a pollutant."

One area he discussed was the difference between manure storage and a manure lagoon. A lagoon may be four to ten times larger than storage and is designed to break down solids and nutrients. But storage systems are designed to conserve nutrients and ultimately to be emptied.

Factors to be considered are the type, size and number of animals, type of bedding used, amount of wash water entering the system and the length of storage time Bowers noted the Soil Conservation Service considers six months the minimum time of storage. Barnyard runoff and storm rainfall amounts also need to be considered in sizing storage.

Site selection should be close to the source of manure. As much clean runoff should be excluded as possible while polluted runoff should be collected. Method of loading and unloading and existing handling equipment must be considered as well as personal preference of the farm operator As Bowers stated, "If you like reinforced concrete, build a reinforced concrete manure storage."

Other factors in deciding storage type and location are suitability of soil, is the possible site on a flood plain, space available, distance to a well or the nearest dwelling, direction of the prevailing wind and local regulations. One thing Bowers views as important is vegetative screening. "I think this is something we have overlooked in the past. Remember, out of sight, out of mind."

Critical aspects in considering the use of holding ponds as temporary storage are the impermeability of the soil, depth to bedrock, type of bedrock and level of the water table. Bowers advocates the use of test pits to check the water table.

If you are using a gravity flow system to load a manure storage, Bowers says you must use little or no bedding. There must be six feet of elevation from the hopper to the full level in storage. Pipe size for a dairy operation is 24 inches or more and for a swine operation, six inches or more, with a minimum four feet of cover over the pipe. Bowers also says manure must cover the pipe outlet before freezing weather.

If topography is right, you can use a gravity unloading system to get the manure to the spreader from the storage tank. You must slope the bottom of the storage to the outlet channel and use two gates, one as an emergency shutdown to avoid accidental unloading of the entire storage system.

"If you have a choice and can only go either loading or unloading with gravity, look at your system very carefully before you make the decision."

In making decisions regarding storage, Bowers urged farmers to take stock of their operation.

"Build what you design," Bowers urged, "and operate it according to plan We want to see manure get to the crops "

Agriculture budget."

Scranton differed slightly from Casey's view, noting he believes the main job of the Department of Agriculture is agriculture, and promised "to see that the Department of Agriculture receives its share of increases in funding."

Scott also assured the farmers that the department would get its share of budget increases.

Marketing was one of the major concerns the candidates addressed. Scranton said he would place "major emphasis on export marketing," and would work to set up a real export department withing the department of ag.

Casey agreed that the state needs personnel who understand the marketing process and pledged his personal attention to the marketing problem. "I want to see in Pennsylvania an aggressive policy for developing foreign markets," he said, adding, "I'm going to be leading this fight."

Scott said he believes private businesses should become involved in handling foreign exports.

Farmers questioned the candidates on how they would compensate for the loss of federal aid to state goverments. While the funding situation is still rather muddy, Casey said he would seek "a system of equitable sharing of cutbacks. We've got to tighten our belts." However, this should be done without a tax increase or excessive spending, he said.

Scranton said he would continue the current administration's tight reign on spending, saying it would be a major error for Pennsylvania to give in to voices calling for a tax increase

Nut tree workshop

HARRISBURG – A Nut Tree Grafting Workshop will be held at the Dauphin High School Vo-Ag Shop on Mar. 1. Conservation District director and vice-president of the Pennsylvania Nut Growers Association, Jay R. Book, will conduct a classroom session and a hands-on grafting demonstration from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Later he will host an hour long walking tour of his 122-acre farm in Conewago Township.

Grafting is a process where a small limb is spliced onto another to produce a top grade nut. The results of grafting create a larger than normal kernel that contains more nutmeat within a shell that's easier to remove.

The Saturday morning workshop is free. Interested persons are asked to call the Conservation District to register in case harsh weather necessitates rescheduling

Specialist 'clears the air' on respiratory problems

BY JACK HUBLEY

LANCASTER — Farm life. Wide open spaces, plenty of sunshine and fresh air. Except for manure spreading time, few occupations can boast a more wholesome work environment than farming.

There are a few farming enterprises, though, that spawn an environment far more hostile than a field of freshly spread manure. The potential for contracting respiratory disorders on the farm is very real, says Penn State Extension safety specialist, Dennis Murphy, and the consequences can range from a mild cough to death.

Speaking at Lancaster County's Crops and Soils Day on Tuesday, Murphy told attendants that farm respiratory problems are usually caused by either toxic dust or silo gas.

Farmers suffering from either silo unloader's syndrome or farmer's lung are normally the victims of toxic dust inhalation. Both disorders weaken the lungs and both are potentially fatal. An incorrect diagnosis of either disease is also common, since both diseases trigger symptoms similar to flu, asthma or pneumonia.

Both disorders are caused by mold spores that grow in hay, stored grain or silage. Heavy concentrations of the spores will appear as a dry, white powder, but Murphy cautions that it isn't those visible accumulations that cause the damage.

Visible dust particles of about 50 microns in size are normally filtered out before they reach the lungs. Tiny spores measuring only four to six microns, however, will stay in suspension for hours after hay or silage is disturbed with a fork. It is these microscopic contaminants that can freely enter the lungs and cause damage, says Murphy.

In either disease, symptoms may not become obvious immediately after exposure. A latent period of a few hours is often followed by shortness of breath and a dry, unproductive cough. The victim becomes fatigued, and chills and a fever of up to 103 may develop.

While the two diseases are very similar in the way they are contracted and manifested, there are some important differences, Murphy points out. Everyone is susceptible to silo unloaders disease, also known as pulmonary mycotoxicosis, while only about 20 percent of the population can contract farmer's lung. And while pulmonary mycotoxicosis is not known to cause permanent damage, repeated bouts with farmer's lung may result in permanent scar tissue and sensitized lungs that become less and less tolerant with each additional attack. In extreme cases, farmer's lung victims may have to choose another occupation.

As with many diseases, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, notes Murphy. Since both diseases strike most often during late winter and early spring after mold has had time to accumulate, the use of mold inhibitors is a good preventive measure. Since disease causing molds are most active at moisture levels of 30 percent or more, harvesting and ensiling crops at the proper moisture level is also important Automated feeding systems lessen the risk of human exposure, and good ventilation is a must.

While lung damaging mold spores may take months to accumulate in stored crops, dangerous concentrations of silo gas can build up within two to three days following storage and remain hazardous for 10 to 14 days, says Murphy.

Many gases are formed during the fermentation process. In airtight silos, carbon dioxide buildup can be a problem. A colorless and odorless gas, carbon dioxide is not normally detected by a victim before he is overcome.

On the other hand, nitrogen dioxide is yellow to brown in color and gives off a bleach-like odor in heavy concentrations. Commonly produced in conventional, open-top silos, nitrogen dioxide reaches its highest concentration about three days following the harvest of silage crops. Murphy points out that this gas is produced in haylage as well as corn silage.

While nitrogen dioxide itself is not considered lethal, the gas combines with water to form nitric acid, which can damage the pulmonary system. High concentrations of the gas can cause spasms in the windpipe, prompting coughing, choking and even death.

While not immediately fatal, the effects of low-level exposure should not be taken lightly, cautions Murphy. Victims of nitrogen dioxide poisoning will suffer from coughing spells, watery eyes, a burning throat and possibly choking. Although a dose of fresh air seems to clear things up, more serious problems may develop while the unsuspecting victim is sleeping.

Since nitric acid causes the leakage of fluid into the lungs, the victim may actually drown while sleeping. "If you're lucky, you'll wake up vomiting," says Murphy.

Nitrogen dioxide poisoning can also become a chronic problem, with symptoms recurring two to six weeks after the initial exposure. "When tightness in the chest, choking or gagging occur, you need to get proper medical attention," warns the extension specialist.

As with toxic dust problems, prevention is the best "cure" for silo gas problems. Since nitrogen dioxide is heavier than air, it tends to accumulate in low-lying areas around the silo. Doors to feedrooms that adjoin silos should be locked to prevent children from entering during the critical two weeks following silo filling, and livestock holding areas adjacent to silos should be properly ventilated.

If entering a conventional silo becomes necessary, the only safe way to do so is with a self-contained breathing apparatus. Dust masks and chemical respirators will not provide the required protection from silo gas, warns Murphy. If no self-contained unit is available, the silo should be properly ventilated before entering, and no one should enter a silo without being able to maintain visual contact with a partner at all times, Murphy stresses.

Even after the silo is considered to be properly ventilated, a dust mask should be worn to protect the entrant from mold spores.

While a variety of masks are available, Murphy does not recommend buying the cheaper models designed for screening "nuisance dust" particles larger than 10 microns. Buyers should note that only masks that are individually numbered and approved for dust and mist will provide sufficient protection from mold spores.

The next level of protection from toxic dust is the chemical cartridge respirator, and only cartridges labeled for toxic dust or pesticides will provide the necessary dust protection.

The most advanced form of dust protection currently on the market is the air stream helmet, a battery powered helmet that pumps air through a dust filter located at the back of the helmet and forces it down over the face. The demonstration model that Murphy uses weighs nearly five pounds and costs $540. "But this is cheap if you've got a problem," he points out.

Dust masks are normally available at local hardware and building supply stores, says Murphy. For those interested in more information on respiratory protective devices, the safety specialist lists the following companies:

Reagan's ag budget is 'realistic,' Helms says

WASHINGTON – North Carolina Senator Jesse Helms, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, today said President Reagan's budget for the U.S. Department of Agriculture for fiscal year 1987 is a realistic approach to meeting the government's responsibility to agriculture while moving toward a balanced budget.

"This budget, which will reduce outlays for the Department of Agriculture by 18 percent in the next year, faces up to the harsh realities and hard choices imposed on a Congress that has insisted on borrowing against the future for too long," said Senator Helms.

Included in the reductions is an estimated $4.2 billion drop in the net cost of operations of the Commodity Credit Corporation, which administers commodity price and income supports and commercial export programs. Senator Helms noted, however, that this cost saving will be achieved without changes in the farm programs as determined by the 1985 farm bill and will require no further action by the Congress. The reduction of $4.2 billion is due principally to lower loan rates authorized by the farm bill, and advanced deficiency payments for the 1986 crop.

"The President's proposal, while it certainly won't please everyone, is an honest and responsible approach to reducing the spiraling costs of the Federal agriculture programs," said Helms. "These selective cuts, applied to less compelling functions of the Department of Agriculture, are far more desirable than the alternatives – indiscriminate, across-the-board, automatic cuts under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings or higher taxes. The President's budget pares agriculture programs with a surgeon's knife, saving it from the meat-ax approach of the Gramm-Rudman reductions. In short, there are no easy or instant solutions, and it is put-up-or-shut-up time if we are serious about reducing the awesome federal deficits that now threaten the stability of America."

According to the Administration, the proposed budget for fiscal year 1987 will reduce net outlays for the Department of Agriculture to $44.6 billion from $54.2 billion, a cut of $9.6 billion.

Additional major reductions under the budget would be achieved by termination of the Farmers Home Administration's rural housing program, cuts in lending levels and interest-rate subsidies by the Rural Electrification Administration, a phase-out of premium subsidies by the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, and ending school-lunch subsidies to children from families with greater than $20,000 annual incomes.

At the same time, the budget provides for an increase to implement the new Acreage Conservation Reserve mandated in the farm bill. Additional funding is also provided for the Agricultural Research Service and farm operating loans of the Farmers Home Administration.

The budget also proposes a 60-percent reduction in Federal funding to the Cooperative Extension Service. "This compares to an earlier proposal to end all Federal funding for the Cooperative Extension Service," noted Senator Helms.

"Undoubtedly, many political voices will condemn the President's proposals. But these voices are silent when it comes to workable alternatives," Helms said. "The days of wish-list budgeting are over. If the requirements of Gramm-Rudman-Hollings are to be met, Congress and the President must prioritize Federal spending. This agriculture budget proposal reflects realistic priorities."

"The burden of proof lies with those who would criticize this budget. Gramm-Rudman-Hollings assures that spending reductions will be made. If there are those who disagree with the reductions the President has proposed, they must be willing to develop their alternative plan for the budget reductions that are now required by law. Political rhetoric is far easier come by than responsible and honest judgements. The trouble is that political rhetoric won't solve the problems."

Profits expected to double last year's mark

LEOLA — Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative expects to double its profit this fiscal year a group of attentive dairymen were told at the annual district meeting held recently.

Michael Donovan told the group that "the first eight months of this fiscal year continue to be the best ever recorded by Eastern." He went on to report "Eastern is continuing to pay all producers the full blend price and is generating substantial marketing profits."

He reported the estimated net proceeds for this year are between $750 thousand and $800 thousand, almost double last year's amount of $438 thousand.

The financial increase is the result of improved profits from the dairy products division, improved handling allowances, better operating efficiency, reduced interest expense and increased plant rentals from two plants leased to Leprino Cheese.

Donovan stated Eastern is also anticipating an administrative surplus this year of $302 thousand compared to a deficit of $79 thousand a year ago. This surplus is the result of substantial reductions in administrative expenses, and the retention of member numbers who are producing a record volume of milk.

Eastern has effectively maintained their membership numbers while nationwide the number of dairy farms has dropped 3 percent, Donovan explained. This past month saw 366 farmers become new Eastern members.

Donovan went on to say that "Membership is the life blood of a successful cooperative. Eastern's ability to maintain membership in light of declining farmer numbers is unmatched by any other cooperative in the northeast area.

A portion of Eastern's success is due to the better informed and more enthusiatic field force that is serving the dairyman Donovan pointed out.

Quality and protein premiums were implemented in June, 1985 for those producers shipping to Leprino Foods. It has since been expanded to include those shipping to Sorrento Cheese Company, Falbo Dairy, Burnetto Cheese Company and Borden Company.

Half of the members whose milk is physically handled qualified for these premiums. Donovan said Eastern is currently looking to expand the number of cheese companies participating in the program.

Last year $70 thousand was paid to those producers with protein content above 3.3 percent. These premiums are paid directly by the cheese companies receiving the milk. Donovan explained that Eastern negotiated with these plants for this agreement.

Quality premiums are also paid to those members shipping to the cheese plants with a somatic cell count below 350,000 and whose milk is antibiotic free, Donovan reported.

Eastern is currently in the process of refinancing the Waverly and Horsehead Cheese plants which were purchased in 1982. Donovan noted that by changing financing companies they will be able to secure a better borrowing rate. This move, Donovan anticipates, will further save the cooperative valuable dollars.

Donovan concluded the program by assuring the members that this successful year would continue, and next year will equal or surpass the current year.

Michael Donovan, General Manager of Eastern Milk Producers Cooperative.

New York state wins with cheese promotion

SYRACUSE, NY — Enthusiastic grocer participation in a New York State Cheese Display Contest, and a publicity tour featuring an on-air interview with Soupy Sales of New York City's WNBC radio station, highlight the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Inc.'s recent Fall Cheese Promotion.

The promotion, which has its roots in the fall of 1985, is currently nearing completion with the naming of prize winners for the display contest. The display contest itself involves New York State dairy case managers and food brokers teaming up to create innovative and attractive displays showcasing New York State cheese. Prizes awarded include various New York State manufactured products, with the grand prize being a three-day, two-night trip to any New York State vacation spot.

To support the display contest, radio advertising was done in major Upstate New York markets and New York City. All radio stations were also provided with 1986 ADA Cheese Cookbooks, which were used as prizes for on-air giveaways and contests.

ADA DC also sponsored several special promotions to generate higher visibility of New York State cheese. In addition to supermarket cooking demonstrations and radio remote broadcasts, the New York State Dairy Princess, Danielle Randall, was featured in a statewide publicity tour focused in the Central New York and New York City areas. Randall presented various radio personalities, including Soupy Sales of WNBC, with gift packs of New York State cheese as part of on-air interviews.

Brian Ward, ADA DC executive vice president, said the entire promotion brought greater exposure to the variety and quality of New York State cheeses. He noted this type of promotion is also an effective vehicle for educating consumers on the value of REAL versus imitation cheese and dairy products.

Planning has already begun for the next Fall Cheese Promotion, Ward said, and ADA DC is presently looking at several innovative program ideas for the 1986 promotion period.

Why the buyout program will work

INTERCOURSE — Will the herd buyout program work?

Theoretically, an Eastern Milk Producers economist told a group of producers at the co-op's annual informational meeting.

Joseph Mathis, Eastern's Manager of Economics and Government Relations, stated that the buyout's goal of removing 12 billions pounds of milk from the market can be achieved because it requires participants to stay out of dairying for five years.

During the five years of non-production which are required, the dairy situation will continue to change drastically. New technology will be available which will have to be incorporated and learned. These advances are ones which would normally be incorporated as they became available on the market.

New items such as growth hormones, isoacids, embryo technology, and on-farm ultrafiltration and blanching will be more common. Cropping changes will continue and market conditions may not be attractive due to lower prices and adequate supplies.

To return to the business, a participant would have to reinvest in dairy animals and equipment. Present equipment would need rehabilitation or modernization after disuse for five years. These total costs of restarting after a buyout contract expires are expected to be high enough to discourage reentry in dairying.

In addition, bidders can supposedly expect to be as well off financially outside of dairying, with the addition of a nonfarm income, as in dairying, said Mathis. That's why the dairy herd buyout program will work, Mathis explained.

The dairy herd buyout or milk termination plan is only one segment of the dairy title of a larger bill known as the Food Security Act of 1985. Mathis went on to highlight the other topics included in the dairy portion of this bill.

One provision provides for a study to determine if casein imports interfere with the support price program.

It also allows casein producers to purchase dried milk powder that the government purchased as surplus with the provision that casein will be the only product made from the powder.

Mathis pointed out an additional subject covered is the creation of a National Dairy Research Endowment.

This provision gives the secretary of agriculture authority to place up to $100 million from the Commodity Credit Corporation in an endowment. The interest from the endowment will develop new dairy products and processing techniques.

This Act also looks to the future with the creation of the National Commission on Dairy Policy. This Commission will be composed of 18 dairy farm organization leaders who will determine the type of program necessary when the current bill expires in 1990.

Mathis also informed the group that the bill provides for the extension of the government donation program. The act also creates a dairy export incentive program, which allows the government to sell surplus dairy products to exporters on bid basis in an attempt to stimulate a commercial export market.

After providing details on the dairy herd buyout program, Mathis went on to discuss the segment of the bill which attempts to minimize the effect of the buyout on the other livestock producers.

Mathis noted that one buffer is the requirement that the USDA purchase 400 million pounds of beef above the normal amount. Half of these purchases will be used for domestic programs and the other half will be used by the military and in export programs.

"The entire picture is complicated, and will require a good deal of searching before any decisions are finalized." Mathis concluded. He suggested that those interested in the program contact their extension agent or the ASCS office in their area.

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

Whole herd sellout?

Many dairymen are trying to decide whether this would be a good time to throw in the towel, hang up the boots, and quit while they are still ahead. If you are simply intending to stay in the business of milking cows, you can ignore the trauma of making the decision. But if you are in that group who are contemplating the advantage or disadvantage of selling out, the pencil work has already begun.

The complexity of such a decision is enormous, but must not be treated lightly. Just selling out in normal times is a heavy enough responsibility, but the consequences of participation in the "Milk Production Termination Program" requires the assembly of lots of facts, and a complete analysis of the ultimate impact on you and your family.

The problem surrounds the BID price for your base amount of milk There must be a clear understanding of what the base period is, and the penalties and restrictions resulting from the decision to bid. Every case has its own set of variables that must be built into the complex formula, so that it is hard to propose a hypothetical solution to guide an individual. The bids could range from $5 a hundred pounds to $50. And five dollars might be high for you, and fifty dollars could be too low for your neighbor.

The restrictions on the use of a farm and facilities, as well as on the retiring farmer, are substantial Clearance and cooperation must be obtained from all creditors, lenders, and landlords or prospective buyers. The impact of those restrictions on the family must be considered.

Alternatives to dairying for the next five years or more must be confirmed, or at least sought seriously Cash cropping, or livestock enterprises other than dairy, will be common. Will they be profitable enough to provide a decent living for the family? Off-farm work may be more desirable, either full-time or as a supplement to farm work A bid must have a built in buffer for simply surviving.

Debt load is a major consideration. Obligations must be satisfied, either by liquidating the debts or arranging for a satisfactory method of continuing payment. Lenders must be consulted and an understanding reached between lender and borrower. If the debts are low, it should be easy to arrange. Heavy debts will be tougher to negotiate, especially if the debt to asset ratio is close. The bid would have to be very high to cover it.

Another major consideration is the TAX CONSEQUENCES of a whole herd sellout. Most dairy farmers have enough tax write-off to keep income taxes to a minimum in their ordinary operations. They are not accustomed to paying heavy annual income taxes, and are not thoroughly acquainted with the difference between ordinary income, and a large, lump sum that would accrue from a sell out. Even if a large portion of it must go directly to creditors, there is still a heavy tax liability according to law It must still be paid, and should be included in the bid price necessary for participation in the program

Before submitting a bid, you should consult a Professional Tax Expert and the tax consequences carefully computed The unaccustomed shock of a substantial tax bill on top of the drastic change in life style could be devastating

Under some circumstances, a well calculated and acceptable bid could be a substantial incentive for participating in the program, and provide a safe and smooth way to ease out of the business. Some will do it, and laugh all the way to the bank But they will be the ones who did their homework beforehand, and didn't wait for surprises

Your County Extension office is equipped to help with the figures A well thought out Computer program has been developed to handle them. But it is up to you to supply the proper data, and to check it for accuracy Then trust the figures, and act accordingly

Dairy Marketing

Price set for January milk at $11.92

NEW YORK -- Dairy farmers who supplied milk plants regulated under the New York-New Jersey marketing orders during January 1986 will be paid on the basis of a uniform price of $11.92 per hundredweight (25.6 cents per quart). Market Administrator Thomas A Wilson also stated that the price was $12.01 in December 1985 and $13.34 in January 1985. The uniform price is a marketwide weighted average of the value of farm milk used for fluid and manufactured dairy products.

The seasonal incentive plan does not affect the uniform price for the month of January.

A total of 16,377 dairy farmers supplied the New York-New Jersey Milk Marketing Area with 1,003,678,531 pounds of milk during January 1986. This was an increase of 6.1 percent (about 58 million pounds) from last year. The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $123,554,209.82 This included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not voluntary premiums or deductions authorized by the farmer.

Regulated milk dealers (handlers) used 409,008,708 pounds of milk for Class I, 40.8 percent of the total. This milk is used for fluid milk products such as homogenized, flavored, low test, and skim milks. For January 1986, handlers paid $13.44 per hundredweight (28.9 cents per quart) for Class I milk compared with $14.97 a year ago.

The balance (594,669,823 pounds or 59.2 percent) was used to manufacture Class II products including butter, cheese, ice cream, and yogurt. Handlers paid $11.15 per hundredweight for this milk.

The uniform price is based on milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat For January 1986, there was a price differential of 16.0 cents for each one-tenth of one percent that the milk tested above or below the 3 5 percent standard

All prices quoted are for bulk tank milk received within the 201-210 mile zone from New York City

Dairy program to sponsor 'Pennsylvania Game' show

HARRISBURG -- Pennsylvania's promotion-conscious dairymen have added a new sales tool to their "Make It Milk" campaign with a grant to "The Pennsylvania Game" on public television.

In the new trivia show, host Lynn Hines tries to stump viewers and a celebrity panel with questions on Pennsylvania people, places and products.

Six public television stations -- WITF in Harrisburg, WQED in Pittsburgh, WLVT in. Allentown, WVIA in Scranton, WQLN in Erie, and WPXS in University Park -- in the state will carry "The Pennsylvania Game" this spring.

"Our prime milk market is Pennsylvania," says Don Duncan, chairman of the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Board. "This makes "The Pennsylvania Game" a natural for us."

Milk will be featured in an acknowledgement of the grant at the beginning and end of each show

According to the Robesonia, Pa farmer, more than 4,000 state dairymen support the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program. The board, comprised of 19 milk producers, oversees the $2 million advertising and promotion program.

Panelists on "The Pennsylvania Game" will include former movie TV star Nancy Kulp, author Bernard Asbell, Wordsmith Elliot Abrams, Pittsburgh TV personality Lynn Cullen, and many others.

Multiple choice questions will encourage viewers to test their skills against guest panelists, it is noted.

"The Pennsylvania Game" is produced at WPSX-TV, University Park. Lynn Hines is producer, and B. Bruce Adams is executive producer.

Lebanon County dairymen honored

PRESCOTT -- Lebanon area dairymen were honored for having the high producing herds this past year at the twenty-second annual District 3 Meeting for Atlantic Breeders Cooperative members held February ll at Prescott Fire Hall.

Receiving Certificates of Merit for having top DHIA production averages were: Irvin Z. Brubaker, Lebanon; David Brandt, Annville; Willow Maple Farm, Newmanstown; Robert Martin, Myerstown; Mervin W. Horst, Newmanstown; Clyde Deck, Lebanon; Leon. Burkholder, Lebanon and Frank Graybill, Hershey.

All herds were at least 10 percent above the state average for milk or butterfat production last year, while at least two-thirds of the cows in those herds are progeny of Atlantic sires. Awards were presented by Willis Ritchey, Atlantic's Field Supervisor for this area.

District three Director, Harold Bollinger of Newmanstown, reported to members that several changes occurred in the AI industry during 1985. He said that the most significant one affecting Atlantic is the formation of Federated Genetics through a partnership agreement with Eastern AIC of Ithaca, NY, and Louisiana Animal Breeders Cooperative at Baton Rouge, LA.

The result, Bollinger said, is a much stronger selection of bulls for Atlantic members and the largest young sire sampling program in the AI industry to assure future genetic strength.

Commenting on the financial report for the cooperative, Director Bollinger pointed out that Atlantic exceeded their 1985 budget goal for income. This helps maintain security for continued sound operations while providing service at reasonable cost to members, he said.

Following a narrated slide presentation on the formation of Federated Genetics, General Manager Harry Roth, reported that emphasis on a strong membership service program in 1985 resulted in increased business volume. Sales through domestic and international market representatives also improved over 1984, he explained.

The Mets' Darryl Strawberry tries a new pitch – milk.

ADA/DC signs Mets' Darryl Strawberry for NYC ads

SYRACUSE — The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council, Inc. has signed the New York Mets' star rightfielder Darryl Strawberry as its new spokesman for milk in New York City.

Strawberry was signed to a one-year contract that will feature him in a television commercial beamed to the Big Apple beginning on April 1, or virtually the start of the baseball season.

The commercial received an enthusiastic response from board members and dairymen attending the ADADC's annual meeting banquet Wednesday night at the Hotel Syracuse.

Completed by the organization's advertising agency, D'Arcy, Masius, Benton and Bowles, the commercial features Strawberry in a variety of baseball action shots, leading up to a strong selling message delivered by the star.

The organization used a slide program to explain the method it employed first to select Strawberry and then, to make the commercial.

Staffers reviewed a variety of other possible choices, including rock star Bruce Springsteen and New York Mayor Ed Koch, before selecting the rising young Mets outfielder.

"We had two requirements in selecting our spokesperson," said ADADC executive vice president Brian Ward. "It had to be someone New Yorkers could identify with, and also someone who would fit in with milk's healthy image. Strawberry was the ideal choice in both areas."

The commercial is designed to appeal specifically to New Yorkers, but remains firmly tied to the ADADC's overall "Health Kick" campaign. It will be supported by bus and subway posters featuring Strawberry.

The dairymen in the audience got to see the less-than-glamorous side of the commercial process, during in the agency's slide show. They learned that extensive meetings and creative sessions had taken place for weeks before actual production of the 30-second spot, which required a week of filming in Los Angeles.

The commercial has been well received in preliminary testing, ADADC officials said.

Export session slated in York

YORK — The Office of International Agricultural programs at the Pennsylvania State University, and the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture are interested in helping Pennsylvania food producers and processors take greater advantage of overseas export markets. A teleconference meeting will be held Thursday, March 6th, from 10:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the York Campus of the Penn State U, 1031 Edgecomb Avenue, York, Pennsylvania.

Despite controversial farm bills, high interest rates and stiff international competition, there are more than a few success stories in U.S. agricultural trade. This Teleconference has been specifically designed to put the spotlight on successful regional and national trade programs and examine the elements of their success.

Some of the programs to be explored will include: almonds, apples, timber, high tech mills, soybeans and others.

Particular attention will be given throughout the teleconference to the interplay of finances, marketing, transportation and government relations in trade programs. Recent U.S. agricultural trade negotiations in China and Japan will be documented via videotape.

Objectives of the teleconference are to explore ways in which American agriculture has been successful in marketing overseas. To develop options which may be available for increasing foreign trade. To determine areas in which additional education is needed to enhance U.S. trade. To increase and improve cooperation between institutions, trade councils, private businesses and government in the areas relating to international agriculture trade.

FProgram speakers will come from agricultural universities, banks, food marketing, transportation and government relations. Anyone interested in exploring export markets should plan to attend this teleconference. For more information, you may call Marion Douglas, Pennsylvania State University, York Campus, 771-4321.

Pork Congress

old pork producer was honored at the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council's Keystone Pork Congress on Thursday at the Penn Harris Motor Inn.

Each year since 1970, the PPPC has picked an outstanding producer under 40 years of age to receive the Council's highest honor. The Council then underwrites the winner's trip to the National Pork Producers Council's annual convention, this year to be held in St. Louis on Mar. 12.

Although he may not have realized it at the time, young Hepler was being groomed for the swine business long before he entered college. His father had been raising swine on the home farm since it was purchased in 1952, and Lyndon recalls that he always liked the pig business. As most farmers do, he enjoys the outdoor work and flexible hours, at the same time acknowledging that farming in the '80's is not an easy way for his wife, Dianne, and him to make a living.

At present the father-son team runs a 95-sow farrow-to-finish operation. Last year they farrowed 11.2 pigs per litter, with 9.9 pigs weaned. The Heplers sold 1700 market hogs last year, along with 100 feeder pigs.

Lyndon likes to use predominantly Yorkshire sows and services his herd with Hampshire, Duroc and Spot boars purchased mostly from local purebred breeders. He keeps a close eye on the Penn State performance test program to stay up to date on the top bloodlines.

The livestock business being what it is these days, Hepler feels that one of his biggest assets is a low debt load. Beyond that, good management takes over.

One of the best management decisions he and his father have made, says Lyndon, was to buy all their corn in the fall and dry it using their own air drying system. This method provides consistently high quality corn. "Before, we were just buying hand-to-mouth, and we weren't getting the same quality from one batch to another," he says.

Another wise move, he notes, was the renovation of the operation's 24-crate farrowing house in 1982. Improvements included raised crates, raised nursery deck pens and an end-wall heat exchanger.

Designed by Penn State ag engineer, Dan Meyer, the heat exchanger separates incoming air and exhaust air by a single layer of aluminum, allowing the air coming into the building to be heated as much as 40 degrees when outside temperatures hover around zero.

Hepler is happy to report that his herd has suffered no disease setbacks, a trend he hopes to continue by isolating all incoming boars for 30 days.

In addition to their swine operation, the family also grows 160 acres of corn, hay and small grains on the 200 acres that make up the two adjoining farms.

Lyndon augments his farming activities by serving on the boards of both the Schuylkill County Extension Association and the Tri-County Pork Producers. He also serves as church council secretary.

Each year PPPC also recognizes two young livestock producers for their involvement and achievements with swine. This year's 4-H Outstanding Pork Producer is Elsie Hower, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Junior Hower of Catawissa (Columbia Co.). Recipient of the FFA Outstanding Pork Producer award is Bo Bush, the son of Judith McManus of Delta, (York Co.)

In its kick-off year the first annual Pork Bowl contest saw 4-H and FFA teams from five counties competing. The Chester County 4-H team came out on top, with York

Canada bans Pennsylvania poultry imports

HARRISBURG — In a move to curb the spread of avian influenza, Canadian Agriculture Minister, John Wise, imposed a three month ban on the importation of Pennsylvania poultry and poultry products on Thursday.

While the ban does include processed eggs, processed meat products may still be imported, according to Tim Allwein of the Pennsylvania Poultry Federation.

"There are at least 10 (Pennsylvania) firms that do a majority of their business with Canada," said Allwein, adding that he expects the embargo to have a major impact on the state's poultry industry. The firms he referred to included hatcheries and broiler and turkey grow-out operations.

Allwein estimated that at least, half of Pennsylvania's poultry exports go to Canada.

Although the deadly H5N2 virus has also claimed flocks in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York and New Jersey since the beginning of the year, Canada did not include those states in the current ban that is scheduled to be lifted on May 31.

No new Pennsylvania outbreaks have been reported since Monday, when a 6,200-bird flock of turkeys located near the Schuylkill County town of Pitman was confirmed.

The flock was depopulated on Wednesday, but Allwein noted that other turkey houses on the the same farm are expected to contract the disease in the near future.

Dry milk sale to Mexico

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has announced an export sale by the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) of 10,000 metric tons of nonfat dry milk valued at $7.3 million to CONASUPO, the Mexican government's food purchasing agency.

CCC sold the nonfat dry milk, part of its surplus inventory acquired under the CCC dairy price support program, for $730 per ton delivered f.o.b. railcar at U.S.-Mexican border points. Deliveries will begin in February with payment in U.S. dollars. No credit arrangements are involved in this sale, Block said.

CCC has made sales of nonfat dry milk to CONASUPO since 1968 and the United States considers Mexico to be its one traditional export market for nonfat dry milk Mexico will also give CCC the opportunity to participate in a tender for additional purchases of nonfat dry milk in the near future.

As of Jan. 10, CCC had 419,350 tons of uncommitted nonfat dry milk in its inventory.

Marjorie Miller quilts treasured family heirlooms

BY BARBARA RADER
Staff Correspondent

CONNEAUT LAKE — A needle, a thimble, some scraps of thread and material are all that Marjorie Miller needs to create a priceless coverlet, better known as a quilt.

"I've been quilting for as long as I can remember," said the Conneaut Lake resident who has developed skills handed down from her mother and grandmother.

Since leaving the farm 25 years ago, Marjorie has devoted many hours to crafting quilts. Her five children have each received a pair of quilts, and her 17 grandchildren each own one of their grandmother's treasured heirlooms. Next in line to receive examples of her handiwork may well be her 15 great grandchildren.

If, as the saying goes, a good quilter takes eight stitches to the inch, then Marjorie probably wouldn't qualify for the title. But numerous awards earned in quilt shows and county fairs offer proof of her expertise.

Because of the long hours required to make a quilt, Marjorie rarely sells her finished products. Only those who are familiar with the time required would be willing to pay a fair price, she says. While her grandmother quilted for one cent a yard, Marjorie notes that today's going rate is between 32 and 40 cents a yard.

Although in years past, quilting was a necessity, "Now they'd rather buy a bedspread or a blanket," Marjorie points out. But anyone who has used a handmade quilt will attest to the superior warmth and comfort it provides.

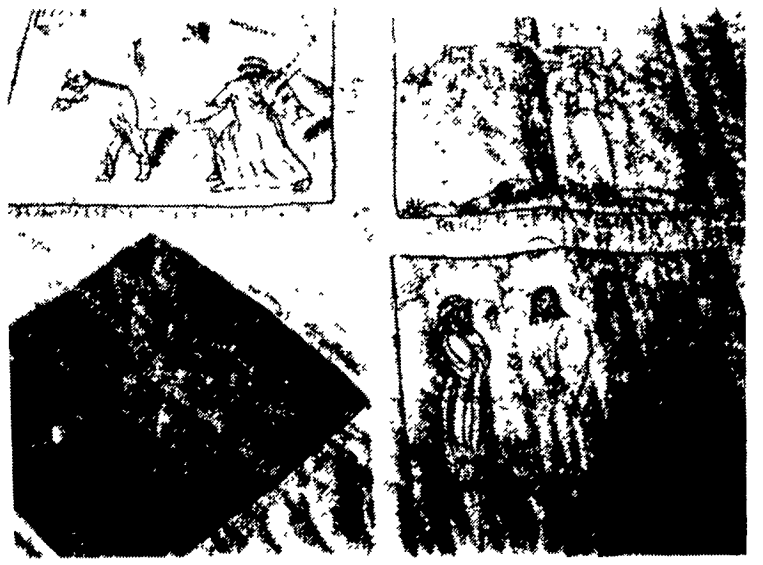
Two time saving devices that Marjorie employs are a cutting board and a cutting wheel that were gifts from her family two years ago. Another time saver is the sewing machine that Marjorie employs for most of her stitching.

Marjorie admires the completed Bible History quilt, one of the most time-consuming quilts she has ever made.

Marjorie recently completed a quilt of months which includes embroidered flowers. This quilt will be entered in a number of shows during the year.

Among her favorite patterns are various designs of stars and the double Irish chain. Although she doesn't care to make embroidered quilts, she does admit that two them are among her favorite creations. One is a patchwork of blue triangles in a star design. The idea for this quilt originated during one of her visits to a quilt show. Other sources of inspiration include magazines and newspapers.

Marjorie's favorite quilt is an embroidered Bible history pattern. This prestamped design was acquired from a Garden City, Missouri, radio station in 1935. The pattern was purchased for her invalid sister, who unfortunately passed away before she had time to finish it. Marjorie finally completed the family keepsake in 1973.



Intricate embroidery is part of the Bible History Quilt Marjorie made. The quilt shows the life history of Christ.

The blocks of the quilt include scenes from the life of Christ, as well as scenes from both the Old and New Testaments. All the embroidery work was done with a single strand of thread, and the entire quilt was set in a design of lavender squares with a quilted crown and cross.

One of Marjorie's favorite pastimes is attending monthly quilting sessions sponsored by the Women's Missionary Service Commission at the church where she is a member. Working together, eight to 10 quilters will complete a double-size spread in three to five quilting days. These quilts are usually donated to children's homes or other institutions.

The group has also sent its handiwork to a town in Ohio where a sale similar to the relief sale held at the Farm Show Complex is held.

Quilters are always on the lookout for thimbles, says Marjorie, noting that her small, tapered fingers make finding suitable thimbles very difficult. Nor is paying a premium price for a thimble any guarantee that it will be durable. One such expensive thimble developed three holes by the time Marjorie had finished two quilts.

One thimble design that Marjorie found particularly fascinating was used by a Japanese neighbor who came to her to learn the craft. With its top end removed, the thimble resembled a ring. But Marjorie is quick to point out that a quilter must be accustomed to pushing the needle with the side of the finger in order to use this unique design safely.

Whatever its design, a thimble should have good indention so that the quilter can get a firm grip on the base of the needle, says Marjorie.

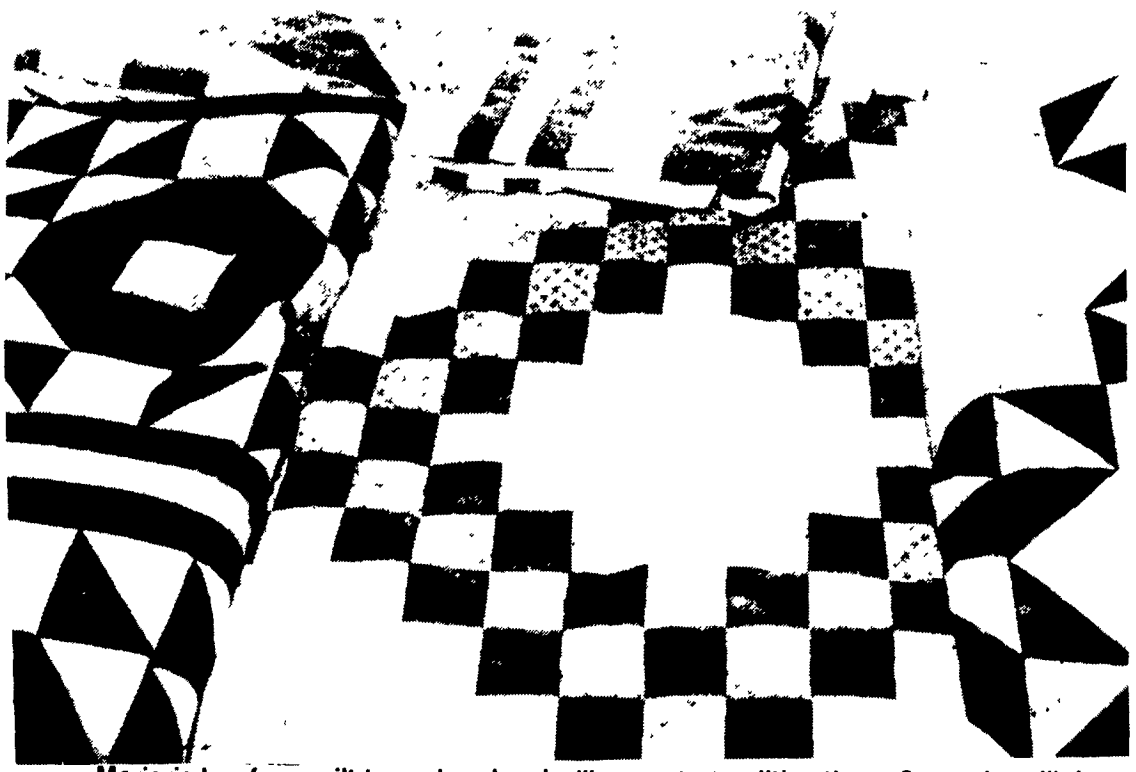
Marjorie intends to take her work with her on a vacation to Iowa later this year with her daughter. The two plan to complete a quilt during their four to six-week stay.

The veteran quilter will also be providing unique Christmas gifts in the form of her own stamped quilt patterns.

Marjorie cautions quilt lovers not to display their prized quilts in direct sunlight, as the sun will fade quilts over a period of time.

In addition to her quilting enterprises, Marjorie also enjoys crocheting. Each of her grandchildren and great grandchildren owns one or more of her crocheted items, including mittens, slippers, doilies and dresser scarfs.

Although Marjorie finds time for crocheting and gardening, a needle, some thread and scraps of material continue to be focal points in her life. And even though she has completed her goal of manufacturing quilts for each of her children and grandchildren, she intends to continue crafting family heirlooms for many years to come.



Marjorie has four quilt tops pieced and will soon start quilting them. Some she will do herself, while others she will give to the church's women's society to quilt for a needy group.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Gee whiz. Seems everyone I talk with lately is into computers.

And I get lots of suggestions that a computer would probably be beneficial in our office. Given the ongoing ag cash flow crunch, it would likely tell us we can't afford high-tech, disk-drive hardware.

Still, with all the mumble-jumble of ag trends and economic uncertainties spinning around in our heads, a computer to sort them out might make sense. As it is, all they do is muddle up my thoughts; and dwell on these depressing facts can soon lead to a headache.

Let's look at some of the input data we might run through a computer trying to figure out where farmers are headed: punch-in surpluses, imports, reduced exports, rising costs, falling prices, projected tight-belt federal budgets, dairy herd buyouts and a deficit-slashing white knight named Gramm-Rudman.

Now input this additional data: a government policy to promote plentiful cheap food, and an off-the-wall trade policy that denied our excess production to other countries we want to punish...who then go elsewhere, and leave us with even fatter bins.

Feed in this, too, on our problem-solving disc: We want, we need, we must have, soil conservation. So we set up a Conservation Reserve. Enter the data that shows farmers who live on the land they till practice better conservation. Then, input the numbers that show farmers losing their land to financial stress, high interest, loss of trade, and additional statistics relating the amount of land being taken over by larger entities, many of them foreign investment operations, who may not give two hoots about saving soils.

Add federal proposed budget data: a USDA budget proposed with a 17 percent cut. Key in that a full third of that budget is for the food stamp, nutrition and feeding programs and nutritional aid to Puerto Rico. Enter further budget cuts to such items as conservation, and farmer and rural education through extension.

Next, let's punch in the defense budget: a 37.8 percent boost in funding over the next five years, with a 1986 $320 billion spending request. Add increased funding for friendly nations to acquire "modern military equipment."

And, don't forget cuts to jobs training programs, and reduced funding for education.

On a more personal basis, punch in a 40-cent milk assessment per hundred pounds, beginning April 1, to fund the buyout of neighbors' herds, and help reduce the production surpluses.

Then follow it with this data: an Irish investment firm preparing to put in five, two-thousand-head, dairy cow operations in Georgia over the next five years - the same period of time we'll be buying out dairy herds to reduce production.

Feed all that into a keyboard, and onto a floppy disc, let the "brains" of microchips whirr in around for awhile, and then punch for a printout.

Would it read out a numerical revelation of an entity heavily armed to defend a poorly educated, unemployed population, hoping to continue eating cheap food produced from eroded farmland owned by foreign money?

Or would the computer take the same way out my head wants to: "Does not compute."

It points to a headache. Until the pain starts slipping, and ends up closer to the heart.

Petersen is FFA Member of the Month

NEW BRUNSWICK, NJ – New Jersey FFA announced Kenneth Petersen of the North Warren FFA Chapter, as February's Member of the Month. Petersen, 16, of Blairstown, is a sophomore at North Warren Regional High School. Currently Ken holds the office of vice-president of his FFA chapter.

The FFA and vocational agriculture education allow students to explore and expand their knowledge of the fields of agriculture. Ken has had this opportunity through several SOEPs (Supervised Occupational Experience Program). Raising beef cattle, working at a produce market and for a local florist have been some of Ken's practical experiences in agriculture. Ken has also learned about leadership and public speaking skills through FFA.

Ken's FFA advisor, Annette Shumaker, states, "Ken is dedicated to agriculture and the FFA." Young individuals, like Ken, interested in agriculture, have the opportunity to understand and gain knowledge from vocational education and the FFA

Saf-T Liner®
Stainless Steel Chimney Liner

Heat-Fab Stainless Steel Chimney Liner is the professional installer's best solution for relining brick chimneys with deteriorated tile or those that were never lined.

A professional installer can reline a chimney in half a day and restore it with an anticipated life of 25 to 30 years of wood burning appliances.

Heat-Fab uses only 24-gauge stainless steel and resistant welds for the kind of safety that satisfies code requirements as a substitute for 5/8" fireclay liner.

Best of all, it's far less expensive then replacing chimneys and one of the most economical products of its kind. From Heat-Fat, where else?

Composition of Fluid Milk Products

Many people think that milk contains a great deal of milkfat. Actually it is a lowfat beverage, even when labeled whole or regular, homogenized, vitamin D milk. Milk fat levels are seldom above 3.3 percent and the minimum is 3.25 percent milkfat. Milk could actually be promoted as more than 96 percent fat free. An eight ounce glass of regular (whole) milk provides about 145 calories and only about 30 milligrams.

Most lowfat milk contains 2 percent milkfat, but you can find 1 5 percent and 1 0 percent milkfat products in some markets. In all cases the milkfat level is reduced, but that does not cut the calorie content in one-half. This is because the milk solids containing the calcium and minerals provide calories, also. Nearly all lowfat milk is fortified with vitamins A and D to the original level prior to the removal of the fat. Two percent milkfat milk contains about 120 calories per eight ounce glass, if not fortified with added milk solids. One and one-half percent and 1 percent milkfat milk contain only slightly fewer calories.

Many people think that skim milk is almost free of calories. Actually it has almost 90 calories per eight ounce glass and about five milligrams of cholesterol.

Include milk in your diet to get the needed calcium and to prevent osteoporosis in later years It makes little difference in what form you include milk. To most active people the few extra calories in two glasses of regular milk are not significant in our daily diet. You may wish to get the equivalent of your two glasses of milk by eating cottage cheese, yogurt or other dairy products.

Lack of Humidity can Cause Problems

You may be more comfortable this winter if you turn down the thermostat.

A lack of humidity within the home can affect your health and cause a variety of other problems. Family members may complain of sore and raspy throats, dry skin and stuffy noses. They may feel cold when the indoor thermometer registers 70°F.

Ironically, reducing the indoor temperature can increase the relative humidity and thus increase your total comfort.

The lack of moisture also affects interior furnishings. Doors will warp and wooden panels will shrink. Furniture tends to dry out and will crack and shrink at glue joints. Static electricity shocks occur when you touch metal objects. Plants will wilt and will die more rapidly.

There are several ways to add moisture to dry air. But to maintain the desired amount, it will probably be necessary to continue adding moisture throughout the heating season.

Moisture vapor from a single source will travel quickly throughout a house. A tea kettle of water on a warm stove top will add great amounts of moisture to the air. You migh even consider taking a bath or shower without using a fan.

Homeowners might investigate some of the special products on the market that put water vapor into the heating system. If you decide to purchase a portable humidifier, buy one that is appropriate for the size of your home.

Make the most of food budget with hamburger

When the budget is tight, many cooks turn to hamburger. And, while serving meals made with hamburger is certainly a good way to stretch the food budget, this very versatile meat can stand alone when it comes to taste.

The recipes blow are an indication of just how many ways you can use hamburger. Try a few of them out on your family soon!

POOR MAN'S STEAK

2 pounds hamburger
1 cup cracker crumbs
1 cup milk
1 onion, chopped
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

Mix all ingredients together and press on cookie sheets ¼-inch thick. Chill several hours. Cut into 4-inch squares, roll in flour and fry until brown on both sides. Put pieces in roast pan or 9x13-inch pan. Cover with 1 can cream of mushroom soup and 1 can water, mixed. Bake at 400°F. for 1½ hours.

GRILLED ONION-BEEF BURGERS

6 thick slices onion
6 beef patties (1½ pounds ground beef)
⅓ cup vegetable oil
2 tablespoons catsup
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ teaspoon worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
6 hamburger buns, toasted

Place onion slices and beef patties in shallow glass dish. Combine oil, catsup, lemon juice and seasonings. Pour over onion slices and beef patties. Marinate 1 hour or more. Grill or broil onion slices and beef patties about 2 minutes per side to desired doneness, brushing occasionally with marinade. Serve grilled onion slices and beef patties in toasted hamburger buns or, if desired, on toasted French bread.

Grilled Onion-Beef Burgers are marinated in a sprightly oil-catsup-lemon mixture well-laced with garlic, Worcestershire sauce and mustard.

HEARTY HAMBURGER SOUP

2 tablespoons butter
1 cup onion, chopped
1 cup carrots, sliced
½ cup green pepper, optional
1 pound hamburger
2 cups tomato juice
1 cup potatoes, diced
1½ teaspoons salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
4 cups milk
⅓ cup flour
3 tablespoons brown sugar

Melt butter in saucepan. Add onions, carrots and green pepper. Cook until onion is tender, but not brown. Add hamburger and cook until meat is crumbly. Stir in tomato juice, potatoes and seasonings. Cover and cook over low heat until vegetables are tender, about 20 to 25 minutes. Combine flour with 1 cup of milk, stir into soup mixture. Add remaining milk and heat. Do not allow to boil.

Note: I use less milk.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Last week I spent several hours walking throughout the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City.

Forty-six people left Lancaster early in the morning to see the exhibits in this large building that is located on Fifth Avenue in Central Park. It extends from 80th to 84th streets. So you can understand that it takes a lot of walking to cover the whole area.

The fresh flowers [illegible] three feet across, were my first impression of elegance. These large units in the Great Hall were magnificant. We used cassettes to tour the special exhibition area which featured the Liechtenstein, Princely Collections. Among the works of art were paintings, sculptures, firearms and porcelains.

A Golden Carriage made in Paris in 1738 was an example of luxurious living. It was made of gilt and painted wood, gilt bronze, steel and fabric. European nobles expressed their power by wearing fancy clothes and driving fancy carriages when they entered cities of their residences. Their horses wore blankets which were richly embroidered.

One section of the museum contained many rooms which depicted various periods of furniture--from Shaker to modern day. Other areas of the buildings had huge Egyptian temples and rooms filled with decorated coffins and jewelry.

I felt that one of the most beautiful exhibits was the costumes worn by men and women of India. The lighting and music added a great deal to the fancy saris.

On our trip back to Lancaster, we stopped for our evening meal at a Greek restaurant in New Jersey. We were given so much food that almost everyone left with a "doggy bag" in hand. Their desserts and breads were an outstanding feature on their menu. It was good to be home again.

Rock salt may damage sidewalk, plants

NEWARK, Del. – Many people reach for rock salt to rid their walks and driveways of unwanted ice But this solution poses problems of its own.

"Excessive salt can cause one type of concrete to flake and deteriorate," warns University of Delaware extension agricultural engineer, Dr. Jim Scarborough.

There are two kinds of concrete, he explains. The more expensive type–air entrained concrete–contains millions of tiny bubbles that help it withstand freezing, thawing and salt damage. The other type–non-air entrained concrete–is not protected against these elements.

"The two types look identical at first," says Scarborough "But after a hard winter or two, you can tell you have air entrained concrete if it's holding up well The other kind will show signs of flaking and exposed stones "

Salt won't hurt air entrained concrete, but it damages the cheaper type

Another reason to avoid using rock salt to melt ice is the corrosion it can cause on the finish and aluminum parts of your car Excessive salt may also damage or even kill plants and shrubs.

Scarborough recommends several ways to minimize the harmful effects of deicing salt. Don't use it as a substitute for shoveling. Remove as much ice and snow as possible before sprinkling lightly with a mixture of salt and sand.

Or, instead of salt, use a mixture of granular urea fertilizer and sand–3 pounds of fertilizer to 100 pounds of sand–to melt the ice. Fertilizer can also damage non-air entrained concrete, but when used in moderate amounts it benefits plants.

If you want traction rather than melting, Scarborough recommends using sawdust, sand or clean cat litter. They won't harm plants, car parts or walks and driveways

Turn on pink noise for more quiet

WASHINGTON — Sometimes you've got to fight with noise.

Turn on some "pink" noise, and whishsssssshhh. Suddenly the hubbub in the room seems to diminish. The right blend of pink noise may sound like nothing more than the whish of air coming out of an air coming out of an air conditioner, but it can be enough to mask the daily clatter of office activity, particularly in open offices that have no doors or solid walls

The actual level of everyday noise doesn't drop one decibel, but the people working there think a relative hush has settled upon them.

Within the last decade, noisemakers have been designed into the acoustical systems of some new office buildings. Random-noise generators operate in combination with sound-absorbing ceilings, and floor and wall coverings, which reduce noise levels. Random noise, unlike music, has no tonal qualities Specific spectra of random noise have been labeled pink and white

Acoustical Perfume

"Sound-masking systems cover up leftover noises by being louder, but innocuous and ignored They've been called acoustical perfume. Fortunately a sound similar to swishing air is just right for speech-masking. It can be shaped to cover the sound of the male voice, which automatically takes care of some other office noises," says Larry Philbrick, an acoustic consultant with Bolt Beranek and Newman, of Cambridge, Mass.

Sound masking is used primarily in large open-office areas, but has been designed also for places such as psychiatrists' and lawyers' offices and college music buildings.

In a typical floor of open offices, the background whish is transmitted through a series of loudspeakers concealed above the ceiling. The sound is generated by two pink-noise generators. Pink noise, so-called in an analogy with the light spectrum, is predominated by low-frequency sound. Two equalizers shape the sound and amplifiers increase it.

Sound-masking systems run on little electricity and are less expensive to install than soundproofed enclosed offices. Although these systems are found in more and more office buildings today, their use is still something people generally keep quiet about.

"It's the whole mind-manipulation issue. Sound masking does make you think you're not hearing as much noise although the noise is still there There's been a great deal of prejudice against it," according to one acoustics expert.

Never Turned Off

People have blamed sound masking for headaches, irritability, malaise, and other psychological problems. Labor Department officials and audiologists say that no studies of its effects on human beings have been made. There is no scientific evidence to prove or disprove a relationship between sound masking and any of these symptoms.

"It will probably not drive anyone bonkers," says one audiologist. It has been used in government offices with no problems, says a federal official

Many people who don't know they are working in offices with sound masking have assumed they're hearing the air conditioner, Philbrick observes. Once the sound is turned on, it stays on. It's when it goes off that you notice it, he says Suddenly the room is noisier

Clothing, Textiles Masters Program offered

LEESPORT — Are you interested in updating your sewing knowledge, increasing your shopping skills, or learning more about wardrobe and color coordination? Would you be willing to share your skills with others in return for training? If so, then you may be interested in the new Clothing and Textiles Masters program being offered by Penn State University Extension Service.

Clothing and textiles masters are volunteers who are trained by professional Extension staff and resource persons. In exchange for 30 hours of free training, the clothing and textiles master "pays back" 40 hours of volunteer time to the Extension Service in their respective county within one year. Volunteers may select from a variety of activities.

Each person taking the course will receive up-to-date, in-depth, and hands-on training and information in the field of clothing and textiles. In addition, each person will receive a resource notebook and a certificate of completion and continuing education credits from Penn State University.

This program is similar to the Master Gardener and Master Knitter programs which have been so successful in extending the Extension Services resources. Volunteer payback activities include working with 4-H clothing leaders, planning related clothing activities such as 4-H Fashion Revue, preparing learning packets, recruiting other volunteer leaders, answering clothing and textiles related questions in the Extension office, and teaching adult/youth workshops

Interested adults are eligible to apply for the clothing and textiles masters program. Job descriptions and applications are available by contacting Berks County Extension Office, Berks County Ag Center, Leesport, PA 19533 For more information contract Michelle Rodgers, Penn State University Extension Home Economist at 378-1327. Application deadline is February 26, 1986

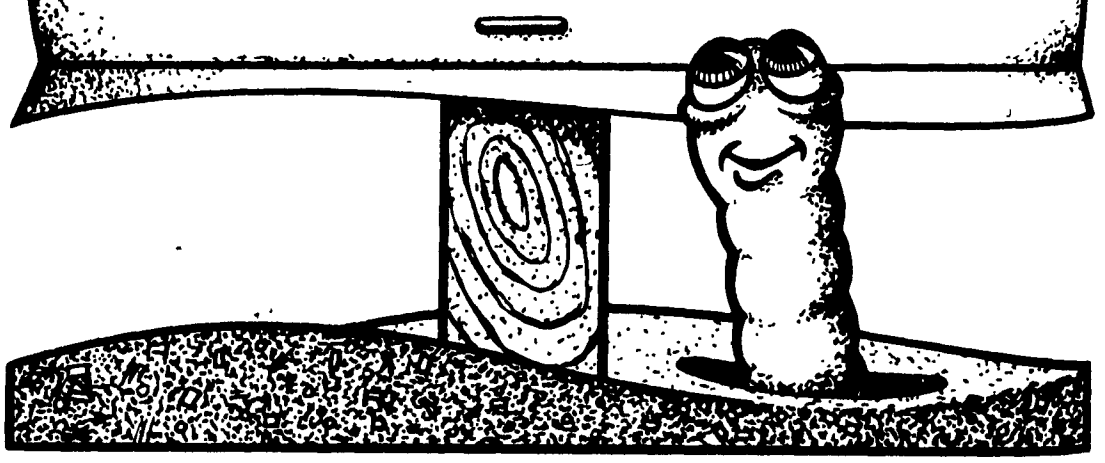
Where farmers' ideas take root.



Addition proposed to Lancaster Co. Ag Preserve

LANCASTER — The Lancaster County Agricultural Preserve Board will hold a public hearing on Tuesday, Feb. 25, 7:00 p.m. at the Warwick Township municipal building on the addition of 550 acres of farmland to the adjoining Agricultural Preserve.

Landowners in the Lititz-Rothsville vicinity of Warwick Township have requested that their properties be included in Agricultural Preserve I, the County's first preserve area which was established in 1983. Agricultural Preserve I contains more than 12,000 acres of productive farmland in Warwick, Clay, Elizabethtown, Ephrata and West Cocalico Townships.

The intent of Agricultural Preserve designation is to establish a defined geographic area of predominantly prime farmland which will be preserved for long term agricultural use. Agricultural Preserves are afforded local protection from unplanned, public capital projects such as water and sewer line extensions, new highways and landfills.

Agricultural Preserves establish strong county policy which protects normal farming practices from nuisance complaints and suits. In essence, farming is the preferred activity in an Agricultural Preserve.

Most importantly, Agricultural Preserve designation gives farmers eligibility to fully participate in the voluntary preservation deed restriction program, including deed restriction sale and donation. The Agricultural Preserve targets preservation benefits to those areas most important to the future of agriculture, and excludes those areas necessary and planned for growth and development.

Landowners and interested citizens are invited to attend the meeting to receive more detailed information and to offer comments and pose questions about the proposed preserve addition and the preservation deed restriction program.

Prior to the public hearing, the Agricultural Preserve Board staff can be reached at 299-8355.

National FFA officers to tour United States

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — The national officers of the FFA will take time during February to travel throughout the Midwest to learn about American business and industry. This year, the Star Agribusinessman of America will also accompany the six national officers and others in the FFA group visiting 13 cities in seven states.

Approximately 150 businesses and industries in the Central United States will host the group in an effort to teach the officers and stars about the structure of the U.S. economic system.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, will be the starting point for the two-week tour. The group will meet with William Munsell, Chairman, Creswell, Munsell, Fultz & Zirbel Inc., and executive vice president of Young and Rubicam, USA, of Cedar Rapids. Munsell is also the chairman for the 1986 National FFA Foundation Sponsoring Board. From there, the group will divide into three teams and cover Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Illinois, Indiana and Minnesota.

"The U.S. tour will give us the chance to visit with many businesses and communities that support vocational agriculture and FFA," commented Rick Malir, National FFA President from Wilson, Kansas. He added, "It is our chance to learn about their work and service as well as an opportunity to express our appreciation to them and explain our current activities."

The U.S. tour follows the officers' return from a visit to Japan, sponsored by Mitsui & Co. where they toured the country to further their understanding of international agriculture.

New Hampshire Ag in Classroom project reaches over 1,000 students

BY DONNA McCONAUGHEY TRUESDELL
Staff Correspondent

MANCHESTER, N.H. — How do you tell how fresh your eggs are? Learn to select garden seeds with appropriate maturity dates for your area. How much of the food you eat is grown in your state?

Urban school students in New Hampshire learned this and more as part of a special program planned in conjunction with the 1986 New Hampshire Farm and Forest Exposition.

Combining efforts of Ag in the Classroom and Project Learning Tree programs, this year's Expo went "all out" for children. The target population was fourth to sixth grade classes within an hour's distance of Manchester, N.H. Special emphasis was placed on urban youngsters who have less opportunities to learn about farms and forests.

Students participated in a one-hour interactive classroom program and then visited the trade show exposition which included over 100 exhibitors. The students completed a scavenger hunt while visiting these exhibits by stopping at nine commodity booths for "clues." At each booth they received their clue and a short educational talk in response to questions found on the scavenger hunt. Also provided were samples of New Hampshire farm products.

The goal was to increase knowledge and give students a broad exposure to the many facets of the agricultural industry in New Hampshire. After successfully completing the scavenger hunt, each student received a wooden ruler thanking them for "Helping Us Celebrate New Hampshire's Farms and Forests."

Many school teachers involved parents in the field trip. This enabled students to pack lunches and "picnic" on carpeted-floors at The Center of Manchester Holiday Inn where the three-day Expo was held. Forest Service and Cooperative Extension Staff recruited and provided volunteer and staff teachers for the interactive classroom programs.

A first-time adventure, this Ag in the Classroom project involved more than 900 students, plus many more children who took advantage of "Friday Night is Kid's Delight." The evening program included watching chicks hatch, making farm animal masks, joining in ice-cream eating contests, telling stories, and enjoying visits from Smokey the Bear and a cow. These activities were coordinated by FFA chapters from the state.

Jim Brady, 4-H agent, helps Ag in the Classroom students select varieties of garden seeds that will reach maturity in New Hampshire's growing season.

The Ag in the Classroom program is new to New Hampshire. It is funded primarily by agri-business and individual farmers. Farm Bureau has taken a major role by providing leadership for the project and raising funds among agri-business and commodity groups for the program.

In New Hampshire, Ag in the Classroom has been initiated by developing a basic fourth grade Social Studies project. New Hampshire requires all students to study various aspects of the state in fourth grade Social Studies. By focusing on this area, Ag in the Classroom not only educates students but also provides a welcome resource for teachers by meeting a need. Currently, materials include a slide set and many other educational activities.

In addition to classroom materials, Ag in the Classroom offers teacher training seminars which are approved for university credits. These seminars educate teachers regarding agriculture itself as well as presenting new ways of providing this information to students.

As Ag in the Classroom advances in New Hampshire, the next area of focus will be at the High School level. Materials will be designed to tie in with the Economics course required for all students. Again materials will be developed to assist teachers in meeting this course requirement.

Another popular item is a computer disk designed by Iowa's Ag in the Classroom program. It includes language arts, math, science, social studies, careers, animal reproduction, and ag game categories.

Designed to challenge fourth grade through adult level users, this disk is available to any group or school. New Hampshire is encouraging individuals and organizations to purchase this disk and donate it to a local school.

Of particular interest to high school FFA students, farmers, and agri-business people is the section on "Modern Farming." This program includes buying and selling products and supplies, maintaining a positive cash flow, managing financing of a farm operation, and many more aspects of management.

The overall goal of New Hampshire's Ag in the Classroom is to make students "Ag-literate." A sign over the Farm Bureau display of this computer disk reads, "Less than 3 percent of the United States population are farmers. This means ag laws and policies are made by non-ag people. Are they making workable policy? Farm Bureau wants to help New Hampshire schools insure our future leaders are 'Ag-literate.'"

New Hampshire's Ag in the Classroom believes this program is an investment in agriculture's future and already they have reached more than 1,000 students through one three-day event.

How do you determine the freshness of eggs? Float them in a salt water solution.

THE MICRO WAY

LANI BLOOMER

Hot Sandwiches for Cold Days

Serve your family hot sandwiches for lunch on cold winter days. With a microwave, it's a snap! And it's a sneaky way to use up leftovers, too!

Here are some hints for heating your own concoctions, and a few new sandwiches to try:

– When making hot meat sandwiches, hot dogs, etc. use a two-step method to keep the rolls or bread from getting hard or rubbery. Heat the meat first, by itself. After the meat is hot, assemble the sandwiches, adding other ingredients as desired. Top with bread or roll and heat for 10 to 20 seconds per sandwich to heat sandwich through.

– When reheating meat, arrange slices or pieces in a ring around a plate, and cover with waxed paper. Heat on medium (50,5) power, or use defrost (30,3) to warm the meat. The time depends on how much meat you have, so check it frequently. Using a lower power setting for the meat keeps it from getting tough and dried out.

– When using cheese in a hot sandwich, add it after meat, etc. is hot, and heat just until the cheese softens. Cheese gets rubbery and stringy if overcooked.

– Bread and rolls will be quite soft and moist when warmed in the microwave. If you want crispier bread for your sandwiches, toast the slices in a toaster first.

– To keep the bread or rolls on your sandwiches from getting soggy, place them on (or wrap them in) a paper towel or napkin. Or, heat the sandwiches on a meat rack, such as a bacon cooker.

Try these "leftover-wiches" when you need to use things up!

Put hot meatloaf slices on a hamburger roll, add a slice of cheese and warm until the cheese melts. Or top the meatloaf with leftover spaghetti sauce.

Top a sliced egg sandwich with mustard and a slice of cheese and warm it up. This makes a quick breakfast for someone on the run.

Fill pita pockets with shredded meat and cheese, or roll thinly sliced meat and cheese in a tortilla for variety. Both these can be prepared ahead of time and frozen. To heat a frozen sandwich, wrap it in a paper towel and microwave 30 seconds on high. Then microwave on medium (50,5) for about a minute until the cheese is hot.

Use split English muffins for open-faced hot sandwiches. Toast first if desired.

These hot sandwiches are hearty enough to make a quick supper, as well as a filling lunch. The first two are variations on that old standby, Sloppy Joes.

Pizza Joes

1 pound ground beef
¼ cup chopped onion
1 10-ounce can pizza sauce
1 teaspoon parsley
½ teaspoon oregano
mozzarella cheese
9 to 10 hamburger rolls

1. Put ground beef and onion in a 1-quart casserole. Stirring twice to break up meat, Microwave on high for 5 to 6 minutes, until no longer pink. Drain fat if necessary.

2. Stir in pizza sauce, parsley and oregano. Microwave on high for 3 to 4 minutes until very hot. Stir in cheese.

3. Spoon about ⅓ cup filling onto roll, cover with top. Place four sandwiches on a rack (or on a paper towel covered plate) and microwave on high for 30 seconds. Repeat with remaining sandwiches. Makes 9 to 10 sandwiches.

TIPS: Add chopped green pepper, olives and mushrooms if desired. Add with onion to ground beef in Step 1. If desired, finely chopped pepperoni or sausage may be used in place of some of the ground beef.

TIPS: For open faced sandwiches, reserve ½ cup cheese to sprinkle on top in step 3 Microwave on high until cheese melts.

– Assemble and freeze left over sandwiches. To serve, wrap frozen sandwich in a paper towel and microwave each for 1 to 1½ minute on high. Let stand a minute or so before serving.

Taco Joes

1 pound ground beef
1 package (1¼ ounce) taco seasoning mix
¼ cup water
¼ cup sliced ripe olives
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded cheddar cheese
8 hamburger rolls

1. Brown ground beef in a 1-quart casserole: Microwave on high for 5 to 6 minutes, stirring once or twice. Drain fat if necessary.

2. Stir in taco mix and water. Microwave on high for 3 to 4 minutes until hot and thick. Stir in olives and cheese.

3. Spoon filling onto rolls, cover with tops. Place four sandwiches on a rack (or on a paper towel covered plate) and microwave on high for 30 seconds. Repeat with remaining 4 sandwiches. Makes 8 sandwiches.

TIP: For open faced sandwiches, sprinkle cheese on top instead of mixing in with filling. Microwave on high until cheese melts. Add shredded lettuce and tomato if desired.

Hot Tuna Sandwiches

1 stalk celery, finely chopped
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
¼ cup mayonnaise
1 6-ounce can tuna, drained
½ cup shredded cheese (cheddar and Swiss are both good)
6 hamburger rolls

1. In a 2-cup measure or mixing bowl, microwave celery and onion for 2 minutes on high. Stir in the rest of the ingredients, except rolls(!).

2. Spread filling evenly on the bottom of the rolls. Place on a paper towel covered plate or a rack. Cover with waxed paper Microwave for 1½ to 2 minutes, until the filling is hot and the cheese melts

3. Cover with roll tops, and microwave for 20 to 30 seconds longer. Serve immediately, makes 6 sandwiches.

NOTE: The times above are for microwaves with 600-700 watts of power; for 500-600 W, and 10 seconds to each minute; for 400-500 W, and 20 seconds to each minute

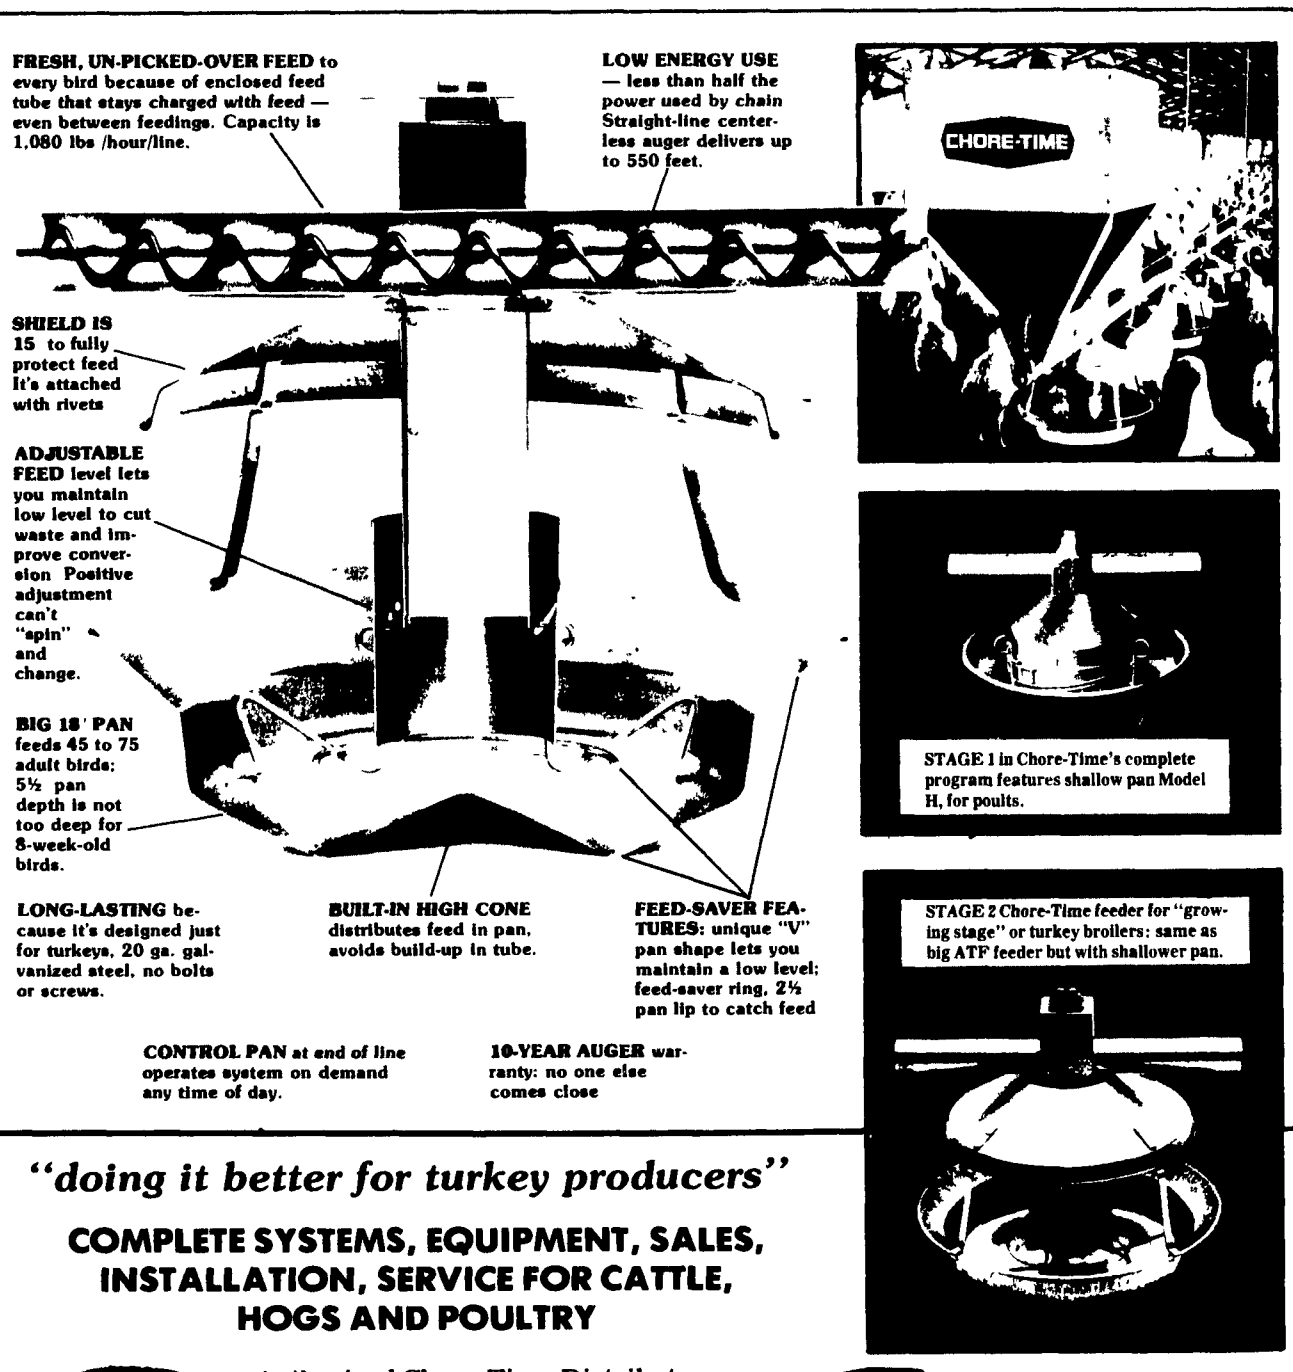
'Nothing else works like a Chore-Time...'

—that's why it's No. 1 with turkey producers

Chore-Time was first with a confinement turkey feeder, while others were trying to sell you made-over range feeders. We've kept improving on our idea. Now, Chore-Time's Turkey Feeding Systems are the standard of the world. No other equipment even comes close — in feed conversion features, in ruggedness, in ease of operation. That's why growers who have Chore-Time say, "Nothing else works like a Chore-Time system." Before you buy, consider the facts about Chore-Time's unique Model ATF Adult Turkey Feeder, plus our starter and grower systems:



FRESH, UN-PICKED-OVER FEED to every bird because of enclosed feed tube that stays charged with feed — even between feedings. Capacity is 1,080 lbs /hour/line.
LOW ENERGY USE — less than half the power used by chain Straight-line center-less auger delivers up to 550 feet.
CHORE-TIME
SHIELD IS 15 to fully protect feed It's attached with rivets
ADJUSTABLE FEED level lets you maintain low level to cut waste and improve conversion Positive adjustment can't "spin" and change.
BIG 18' PAN feeds 45 to 75 adult birds; 5½ pan depth is not too deep for 8-week-old birds.
LONG-LASTING because it's designed just for turkeys, 20 ga. galvanized steel, no bolts or screws.
BUILT-IN HIGH CONE distributes feed in pan, avoids build-up in tube.
FEED-SAVER FEATURES: unique "V" pan shape lets you maintain a low level; feed-saver ring, 2½ pan lip to catch feed
CONTROL PAN at end of line operates system on demand any time of day.
10-YEAR AUGER warranty: no one else comes close
STAGE 1 in Chore-Time's complete program features shallow pan Model H, for poults.
STAGE 2 Chore-Time feeder for "growing stage" or turkey broilers: same as big ATF feeder but with shallower pan.

Winter survival tips for everything from hypothermia to plants

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Cold weather. Unless your weekends are defined by the amount of white powder on slopes in West Virginia or Pennsylvania, who needs it, right?

If heading for the tropics is out of the question, you might try some coping mechanisms instead.

Here are a few for some of the common problems brought by winter's chill.

Hypothermia

Yes, winter is cold. And it can kill.

Hypothermia is the sixth most common killer of the elderly. And it strikes others with nearly as much deadly impact.

It is defined as low body temperature (anything below 90 degrees Fahrenheit). Even mildly cold weather can cause hypothermia.

Other symptoms include stomach cold to the touch, a sense of confusion, puffy face and shivering.

What do you do if you come across someone with these symptoms? First, stay calm. Then, get help. Third, cover the person gently, especially the top of their head and neck.

Do not massage arms, legs, or elevate the legs. And, do not give the person hot liquids or alcohol to drink.

The good news about hypothermia is it's preventable. The best prevention is dressing in layers to stay warm, especially the extremities. Wearing a hat, for example, conserves an enormous amount of body heat - your head is actually like a chimney and, left uncovered, releases body heat.

Driving On Snow And Ice

Before you even think about how to drive in snow and ice, take a look at your tires.

The Maryland State Police accept radial tires for designated snow emergency routes. In most areas of Maryland, with the possible exception of the Eastern Shore, all-weather tires are preferable. In western Maryland, those designated as "winter" tires are the safest bet.

Techniques for coping with ice differ from car type to type. If your's is a rear-wheel drive car, the old advice about letting up on the accelerator when you hit ice and start to skid still holds. However, if your's is a front-wheel drive vehicle, you're probably better off maintaining throttle or even applying a bit more pressure to the gas pedal.

And now, techniques for braking on rain or ice-slick roads are different, too. The traditional advice was to pump your brakes. Instead, apply light but increasing pressure to brakes, especially disc brakes, until you reach the point that you feel the car beginning to skid — then let up slightly on the brakes.

And what about steering? The traditional advice here was to turn the steering wheel in the direction of the skid. Now experts say you should turn the wheel in the direction you want to go.

Saving Your Outdoor Plants

Heavy winter ice and snow, especially the "wet" snows, can do a number on the plants you took out a second mortgage to buy last summer.

Broad leaf evergreens seem to take the worst beating. After a heavy snow, take a broom and head outdoors to brush the snow from those plants. Take care, though, to use the broom to shake the branches, rather than try to "sweep" the plant clean. That could cause damage to the foliage.

If you're in the habit of spreading sand on walks or driveways near outdoor plants, that's fine. But stay away from salt and fertilizers - they can wash off of those surfaces and into the root zones of plants.

Don't Expect Too Much From Your Fireplace

Precisely when you need the extra heat, that's when your fireplace is the least effective.

On very cold and windy days (temp. range of 20-32°F), a fireplace is likely to draw cold air into the house through cracks and poorly sealed doors or windows.

That forces your furnace to work overtime to furnish the fireplace and living quarters with warmed air.

Windy days can be especially adept at robbing your home of warm air through the fireplace. If you shut down your fireplace and leave the flue partially open to vent exhaust gases, warm air will be drawn from the house straight up the chimney.

Why? The wind passing over the top of your chimney creates a velocity inside the chimney equal to the windspeed outside. That turns your chimney into a vacuum cleaner, sucking warm air up through the flue.

Winterize Your Dog

If you have an "outdoors" dog, is it necessary to bring the pooch inside when fall gives way to winter?

Actually, no, so long as you provide proper food and adequate shelter for the dog outside.

Shelter for your best friend should be water and draft-proof. And it should be large enough to allow the dog to stand, but small enough to conserve heat.

The floor of a dog house should be raised above ground level to keep it dry, and the door should face a direction opposite prevailing winds. If possible, block the wind from the opening and provide a cover for the door.

Don't place blankets in the dog house - they can get wet and freeze. Instead, use dry cedar shavings or shredded newspaper.

Contrary to popular opinion, dogs generally do not need more food in the winter. Actually, maintaining the same nutritious diet you give the animal the remainder of the year is best And don't forget to provide plenty of clean, ice-free drinking water.

Cabin Fever.

This is about the time of year when a phenomenon commonly known as "cabin fever" often sets in. Symptoms for me include feeling lathargic, depressed and closed in.

At this time of year, we spend much more time indoors than during the more temperate seasons. And between the rain, sleet, snow and freezing temperatures it is a real effort to get dressed to go outdoors. Add two or more children to the get-ready list, another four mittens, two pair of boots and ski caps and you've just spent another half hour getting ready to go out. Result: we stay inside and develop varying stages of cabin fever.

However, we can prevent or at least alleviate some cabin fever by creatively capturing a few snatches of time. Start off your list by planning one specific outing at least once a week. Preferably, this event will be something fun rather than something that has to be done Even just going for a walk while pulling the kids on a sled may do. And if you don't have any kids to walk, then take the dog. Our puppy loves the snow and her antics in the white powder are usually good for a few laughs. (One of the best medicines for this fever!)

Another way to brighten the winter days is to plant some spring bulbs in an pot, add some sunshine and water and you'll have a touch of spring in a few weeks. It's mentally refreshing just to see some bright green shoots pushing their way skyward and breaking into blossom.

Dig in the closet and pull out those old board games that you haven't played for years Recently, while "child-sitting," I challenged the kids to bring along their old games We filled several hours re-learning Candy Land, Shoots and Ladders, and even challenged ourselves with Go to the Head of the Class. And while you are finding the old games, clean out the closet You'll be one closet ahead on the spring housecleaning, and that's a great feeling.

Now is also the time to do something for someone else At this time of year, many families have a little more time to visit that neighbor, grandparent or friend Prepare some bread or cookies to share with someone special.

Read, read, read. Visit the closest library and freshen your mind with new thoughts and characters. Check the library for a story hour that your children can attend. One of my favorite winter activities is curling up with a cup of tea, an afghan and a good book It's not always possible to sit for hours doing that, but even a half hour is refreshing

Fortunately, cabin fever is curable. A dose of one of the above ideas should alleviate some of the symptoms. Take a moment now and jot down a few more ideas for yourself and for your family Let's wipe out cabin fever before it spreads!

Buckle up for National Child Passenger Safety Awareness Week

ARDMORE — National Child Passenger Safety Awareness Week will be observed in Pennsylvania from Feb. 23 through March 1. Governor Thornburgh will be proclaiming the week as a time for residents to be commended for protecting their young children The mayors of Pittsburgh and Philadelphia will participate in ceremonies opening the week in their respective cities.

During this specially designated week state and local police will be participating in looking for families that are buckling up their children. If spotted, these parents will receive a special commendation from PennDOT for caring enough to protect their child's safety in the car

Act 53, the Pennsylvania Child Passenger Protection Law, mandates that every child from birth to age four must be restrained in an approved car seat when riding in an automobile. Children one to four years have the option of riding with seatbelts in the back seat

According to the Pennsylvania Child Passenger Safety Project, 60 percent of all young children are now being buckled up by their parents. However, using the carseats correctly is still a problem.

Many parents do not take the time to secure the harness snug, to route the seatbelt through the car seat frame in the correct spot, or to face an infant seat towards the rear of the auto Re-reading the manufacturer's directions and taking the few extra seconds to secure the seat properly is critical to assure adequate protection for the child.

Currently, Pennsylvania has 230 car seat loaner programs providing 15,000 car seats to citizens at a nominal rental fee Families can obtain information about a loan program near them by calling 1-800-CAR BELT.

For more information call the Child Passenger Safety Project at 1-800-CAR BELT.

Extension specialist lists strategies for life transitions

STATE COLLEGE - Dr Barbara W Davis, Extension specialist in adult development and aging at Penn State University, recently gave a presentation in New Orleans at the 38th annual scientific meeting of the Gerontological Society of America.

Davis addressed the strategies employed by the Cooperative Extension Service in educating people for mid and later life transitions. She gave an overview of Extension programs being used throughout the country to help adults and their families deal with major transitions that commonly occur during middle age and later years

Davis has developed strategies to help adults and their families cope with mid-life reassessments; adapt to living alone as a result of separation, divorce or widowhood; and manage shifts of the independence/dependence balance as family members grow older

Davis and two other gerontology specialists from the Extension service in Oregon and Texas, described educational programs and resources that reach across the generations to help ease transitions for the young as well as the elderly in growing families The group also discussed ways to more effectively link Extension programs with other community groups and health care facilities

Alfred State College offers hands-on swine experience for students

ALFRED, N.Y. – The first pigs born at Alfred State College's new swine production facility will go to market in June, six months after birth and with impressive girth.

The porkers, that began arriving in litters in mid-December, debut at about 2½ pounds, according to college farm manager Roy Doane who's doubling as midwife/"mothers' helper" at the $100,000 swine facility that opened last fall.

"By the time our pigs are transported to the packing house, each will weigh about 225 pounds," Doane said. He estimated that some 575 pounds of special feed is consumed per pig, "farrow to finish," to bring the animal to market weight.

That's not chicken feed, considering that peak population is expected to hit 500 when the facility is fully operable. From the initial four boars and 47 gilts, Alfred's pig population has grown to more than 150 to date, with a projection of 450 by June.

A far cry from the garbage-eating pigs of cartoon film and fable, Alfred's swine feed on a mixture of corn, oats, alfalfa, and bone meal, "but primarily corn," Doane said "The pig's rate of growth depends on both environmental and nutritional factors. The swine producer of today has to provide both at a higher level to raise the leaner-quality pork products the consumer is looking for."

Doane and others say the swine production facility is a "model" in the state, since it incorporates such high technology concepts as computer-managed resources and ventilation units to ensure energy efficiency. "Yet, this is typical of what the industry is using as more technology is being used in agriculture," the farm manager commented.

The college believes it is also meeting the needs of many students in animal husbandry who are interested in knowing more about swine production so they can be more diversified in their farm operations.

The majority of funding for the facility ($70,000 out of about $100,000) was from the Educational Foundation of Alfred, Inc., which often assists such instructional support programs. Income from the facility will be used to repay this funding.

Much of the actual construction of the 5,388-square-foot structure was by students enrolled in Alfred's School of Vocational Studies in Wellsville who undertook the project as part of their hands-on educational experience

"A Little Out Of The Way... But A Lot Less To Pay"

Americans are eating more veggies as population ages

NEWARK, Del. — The United States is changing from a youth-oriented society to one in which middle-aged and elderly people set the pace because of the sheer force of their numbers. Postwar WWII baby boomers have grown up and are now entering their prime buying years. Wellness, good nutrition and exercise fill the bill for today's consumer.

That's good news for people who raise vegetables, says University of Delaware extension crops marketing specialist Carl German. According to him, interest in healthy eating habits, plus growing Hispanic and Asian populations, are altering the way people eat — in the direction of increased consumption of an increasing number and range of fresh fruits and vegetables.

Demographers predict the country's largest population growth over the next 10 years will occur in the 35 to 44 age group. In 1980 there were 14.5 million people in this group. By 1995 it could include 23.5 million.

"That's a terrific market for anyone with something to sell," says German, "because household income and family size are almost at their peak at this age. With the average life expectancy of almost 75 years (in 1982), health and nutrition could remain major concerns well into the 1990s as this group of Americans continues to mature."

Supermarket salad bars, a recent trend, seem to mirror these demographic changes, the marketing specialist says. A 1984 Produce Marketing Association survey showed that salad bars represent, on the average, just over 8 percent of produce department sales, with sales ranging from 1 to 20 percent in individual stores. The PMA study also showed that the number of supermarket salad bars doubled from 1983 to 1984. The number may well be much higher today.

"This trend in fresh produce marketing makes sense when you consider the following underlying changes in our society," German says.

- The number of single shoppers has increased, so smaller quantities of many items need to be offered.
- Elderly shoppers have increased; as a group they eat more salads and prefer to buy smaller quantities.
- The percentage of working women is rising, and this group of consumers find ready-to-eat [illegible] highly desirable.
- More men are doing the shopping now, and studies show they, too, are prepared to pay extra for convenience foods.
- People are becoming better educated about nutrition. Eating "light" is considered "right," moving salads from the side plate onto the entree plate.

Supermarket salad bars offer a wide selection of items — anywhere from 15 to 60, with an average of 37. According to the PMA study, the 10 most popular items are iceberg lettuce, tomatoes, mushrooms, broccoli, cauliflower, cucumbers, spinach, seasonal fresh fruit salad, bell peppers and strawberries.

It takes an intensive 79 hours of labor per week to acquire only 8 percent of sales from a salad bar. So why do it? Because it attracts customers to the store.

Changes in the country's ethnic makeup are also behind today's increased demand for fresh produce. The total U.S. population rose by 11 percent from 1970 to 1980, but different racial groups had different growth rates. The white population grew by 6 percent, while the black population grew by 17 percent. At the same time, there was a 71 percent growth in Hispanics. At this rate, they will be the largest minority group by 1990. Currently, the fastest growing ethnic group in the U.S. is made up of Asians. This group grew by 126 percent between 1970 and 1980.

"Both Hispanics and Asians are known for their love of fresh fruits and vegetables," German says. "Their increasing presence is creating even more opportunities to sell produce — especially exotic items. As a result, we can expect to see more jicama, daikon, carambola, chili peppers, cactus leaves, cherimoya, exotic mushrooms, radiccio, miniature vegetables and much more in supermarket displays. Eventually, these items may well be assimilated into America's dietary mainstream."

Single shoppers, working women, the elderly and the nutrition-minded all add up to an increased demand for supermarket salad bars, which typically offer an average of 37 items.

Sound impossible? Think for a moment about yesterday's exotics — avocadoes, kiwifruit, papaya, cherry tomatoes, mangoes, pineapples, alfalfa sprouts. All are now staples in most supermarkets. Today's produce department carries an average of 216 items; some carry over 400.

"A supermarket's produce image is one of the principal factors influencing consumer choice of a store to shop," the marketing specialist says. "Supermarket operators, like direct market operators (such as roadside stands), look for something different to set them apart from their competition. Wide variety and salad bars both fill the bill. They convey freshness, convenience and choice."

Extension offers program on cholesterol, fat

NEWARK, Del. — Studies are indicating that the average American diet has 40 percent of the calories coming from fat when the recommended level is 30 percent. People can read a great deal of information, hear of various techniques to reduce the fat and cholesterol, yet there still may be questions.

Debbie Amsden, home economist for the New Castle County Cooperative Extension Service will present a three-week series of programs to address the issues related to fat and cholesterol in the diet. The course is designed to help those who want to reduce this health risk factor and for those who need to reduce the fat and cholesterol in their diet.

The course will include how to adapt recipes, how to find out how much fat and cholesterol is in a food, options when eating in a restaurant and demonstrations of how to reduce the fat and cholesterol during food preparation. Also discussed will be the known relationships between fat and cholesterol.

The series will be held March 5, 12 and 19 at Townsend Hall at the University of Delaware in Newark from 1:30 to 3:00 p.m. This program, open to all without regard to race, color, handicap, age or national origin is free, however people interested in participating are asked to register by calling the New Castle County Cooperative Extension at 451-1239 by February 26th.

Warwick FFA celebrates FFA Week

Warwick FFA celebrated National FFA Week with displays in the high school lobby depicting popular interest areas of study in vocational agriculture. The six displays included: fruit and vegetable production, by Janet Snyder; horse production, by Shelly Urban; dairy production, by Dennis Bair; small animal production, by Sean Deemer and Jamie Adams; small gasoline engine repair, by Sean Deemer; and FFA awards and achievements, by Tina Strauss.

In addition to the displays, FFA members treated faculty members to cherry pies on Wednesday and served refreshments at the Warwick Young Farmers meeting on Monday. Members gave demonstrations in a Food For America Program to elementary schools within the district.

Warwick FFA members are busy making plans for their annual parent-member awards banquet, scheduled for March 25 at Kreider's Restaurant in Manheim.

Summer award trips are being planned for Great Adventure in July and deep sea fishing in Delaware in August.

Twin Valley FFA

Rick Hicks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hicks of R2 Elverson and a tenth grade student at Twin Valley High School, was the winner of the recent FFA creed speaking contest held by Twin Valley FFA.

Rick is a first-year member of the FFA chapter — a greenhand. The creed speaking contest was open to only those first year members — greenhands — in 9th and 10th grades.

Rick had previously won the creed speaking contest at the Eastern Pennsylvania FFA Leadership Conference at the Pocono Environmental Education Center in October. He also was one of the chapter members who exhibited sheep at the Pennsylvania farm show.

Other participants in the local contest were B.J Cylcewski, Lauren Schwartz, Mike Stoltzfus, and Larry Mountz. The FFA creed was written in 1930 by Mr. E.M. Tiffany and revised in 1965. It is a five paragraph expression of what FFA members believe in and try to practice through their chapter and individual activities.

As the local contest winner Rick will receive a free FFA jacket. He, as well as the other local contest participants, will also compete in the Berks County FFA creed speaking contest on Feb. 24. The top county winners will advance to tri-county competition, then to Eastern Pennsylvania competition, and finally to the state contest. The state winner receives a free trip to the national FFA convention in Kansas City, Mo. next November.

Community volunteer receives Extension award

NEWARK, Del. – Kay Powell, a medical research technologist at Kent General Hospital, has received the Delaware Cooperative Extension Service's prestigious Friend of Extension award Delaware extension director Dr. Richard E Fowler presented the award to her during the recent annual extension conference at the Sheraton Inn in Dover.

A native of Virginia, Powell grew up closely associated with extension and has continued that association since moving to Delaware a number of years ago She is currently president of the Kent County Extension Advisory Council and vice chairman of the National Extension Advisory Council, as well as a member of the national Council for Agricultural Research, Extension and Teaching In addition, she is past president of the Delaware 4-H Advisory Council and the Extension Homemakers Council

"Kay's special strengths lie in her organizational skills, and her knowledge of and concern for extension programming," says one extension professional who has worked with her. "She has a thorough understanding of the many facets of the extension service and their relationships She has represented us well on many occasions "

A volunteer 4-H leader for 20 years, Powell and her family – husband, Jim, and their four children – have hosted international 4-H youth exchange students in their Dover home

Two extension professionals – Kent County agricultural agent Robert C Hochmuth and agricultural engineer Thomas H Williams – also were recognized at the conference

Williams received the Outstanding Program Accomplishment award for his long-term efforts to develop economical irrigation systems for Delaware farmers, including designs for both above- and below-ground water delivery to crops. With his help, the number of irrigated acres in Delaware has rapidly increased over the past 10 years. Corn farmers, in particular, have benefited from this program.

Hochmuth, who joined the Kent County extension staff in 1982, received the Outstanding New Extension Agent award for his accomplishments in working with different clientele, including Delaware vegetable producers, grain farmers, the local nursery industry, and home gardeners He has become a key resource person for area potato growers in their attempts to control the Colorado potato beetle, and has been instrumental in introducing a highly successful alfalfa pest management program in his county.

At the conference it is also customary to recognize an employee who provides essential support services for extension professionals This year the Outstanding Staff award went to Sussex County secretary Edna Marvil

The awards program is sponsored by the Delaware chapter of Epsilon Sigma Phi, the national honorary extension fraternity.

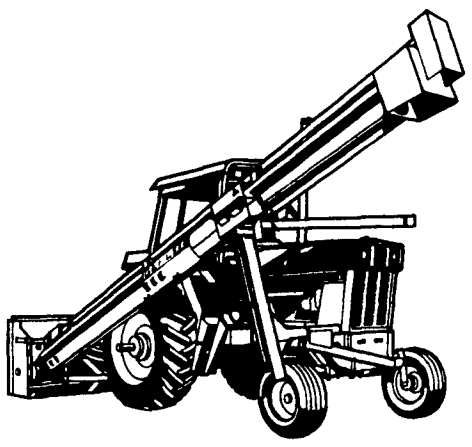
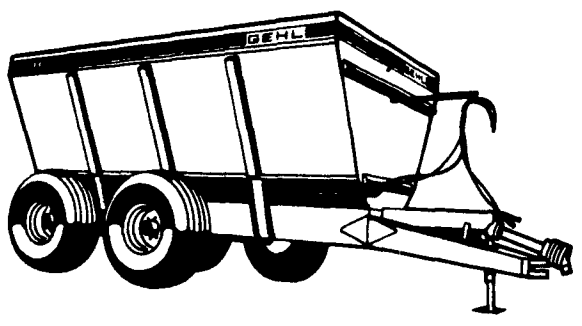
HERE'S THE SCOOP ON GEHL SKID LOADERS AND MANURE HANDLING EQUIPMENT FROM BINKLEY AND HURST BROS.

Dependable...through thick or thin



Manure may be too thick to pump, too thin to bucket. It doesn't matter to the new Gehl 22 all-purpose manure loader. Powerful blades in the scoop break up the most crusted manure — force it into a heavy auger and up the loading chute without jamming or clogging. At top speed, this same system handles totally liquid loads. For greater manure handling efficiency, the 22 loader is the answer. See it today!

Get out of the field faster



You can...with a Gehl 500 Series manure spreader, designed specifically for handling semi-solid manure. You'll spread up to 1500 gallons of sloppy, self-leveling manure in as little as two and a half minutes. A heavy-duty chopper-type auger thoroughly mixes manure for even spreads. You'll get super fast unloading — and uniform spread patterns up to 50 feet — with the oversized rear fan. Ask us for a demonstration today!

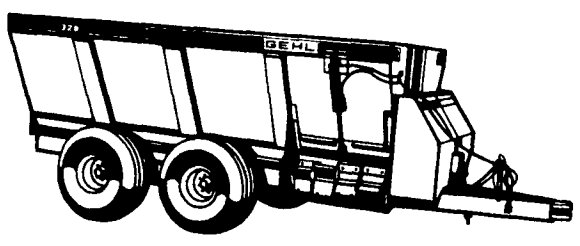
Performance-proven



Solids, semi-solids, liquids, pen-packed, even frozen manure — you can spread them all with a new Gehl 300 Series manure spreader. Gehl's unique square-tube auger breaks up manure and blends it more thoroughly than conventional augers. And in winter you can park the auger in the "up" position, then power down to slice through frozen material. Variflo front, right-hand discharge gives you complete application control. And Uni-body construction lets you haul the heaviest loads. Stop by for a demonstration today!

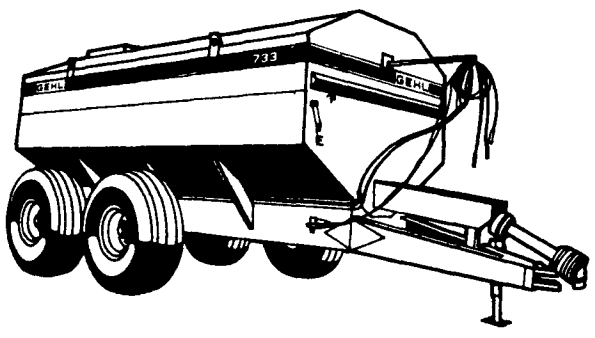
Save time and money



You can do both...with a Gehl 700 Series liquid manure tanker. It can handle the toughest jobs with the spreading accuracy you need to get the most value from your liquid manure. A specially designed internal auger agitates manure and delivers it to the discharge valve for constant spreading or injecting. A positive-seal gate eliminates spillage. And a fill indicator lets you monitor the manure level in the tank to prevent overflow during loading. See for yourself. Ask us for a demonstration today!

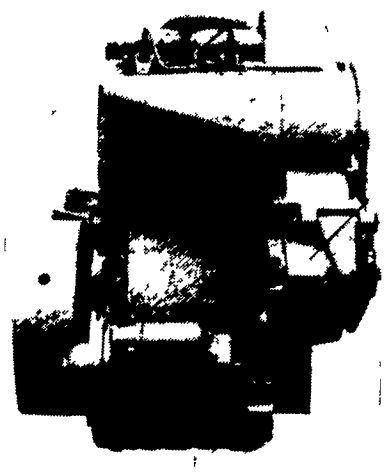
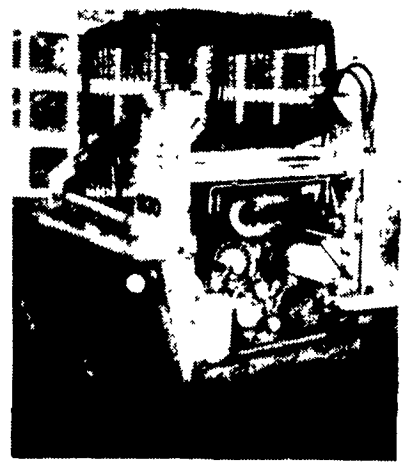
MADE FOR EACH OTHER





- Next time your skid-steer loader engine breaks down, have a Deutz repower job done by us - or do it yourself with some advice from us. Costs much less than new diesel loaders, plus accelerated tax depreciation rate too. Plus fuel savings alone could return the purchase price.
- Repower with a DEUTZ F2L-511 diesel, 30 Hp @ 2300 RPM SPECIAL SALE of surplus engines, loader version, spec #251-015/02. This engine is the diesel option used in many major brand skid loaders.
- Most hydro drive and some belt drive skid loaders can be economically repowered.

Avian Flu Monitor

Maryland Extension issues poultry movement guidelines

COLLEGE PARK, Md. – Avian influenza nearly wiped out the poultry industry in Pennsylvania two years ago, and threatened poultry producers in the Delmarva region of Maryland and Delaware.

Although researchers, veterinarians, and state officials were able to curb the spread of the disease, experts say the local poultry industry is not yet out of danger.

"The problem is still out there, and the potential exists for the disease to remain undetected and spread to commercial, specialty or backyard flocks," says Dr. Edward T. Mallinson of the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service.

For at least the next 30 days, says Mallinson, producers are being asked to stop any business transaction with live birds that would involve their transport from one farm or region to another.

"We're asking producers to sit tight for a little while. This situation may resolve itself in fewer than 30 days, but we don't want to take any chances," Mallinson says.

Apparently, the movement of live birds which may be recovered carriers of the disease is the most common way avian influenza spreads, he says. The disease also may be spread by unsanitary poultry trucks and crates that contain virus-contaminated droppings or other debris.

In the meantime, he says, producers large and small should follow these guidelines to weather the storm:

Restrict traffic to your farm. That applies especially to other growers and shippers of live birds, and it includes family and friends who handle live birds.

Don't borrow or lend equipment or machinery.

Shower and shampoo immediately after coming in contact with others who are involved in the poultry industry and before you enter your poultry house

Don't allow anyone to enter your poultry house or egg room unless they are wearing sanitized coveralls and boots. Change your clothing when you leave your poultry house. And keep a pair of boots to be used only for your poultry house or egg room.

Only bring on the farm, or take from the farm, those articles that can be cleaned or disinfected.

Avoid contact with all wild birds and waterfowl.

Notify state agriculture officials if you have a noticeable rise in disease or deaths in your flock. Excellent and free diagnostic services are available.

Livestock dealer ordered to pay civil penalty

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The U.S. Department of Agriculture has ordered Richard D. Baumert, of Rt. 1, Herndon, Pa., to pay a $1,500 civil penalty and placed him under a cease and desist order.

A USDA official said the penalties were ordered in default when Baumert failed to answer federal administrative charges of doing business as a livestock dealer without a bond.

Baumert buys cattle at auction markets in central Pennsylvania, Maryland, the Shenandoah Valley of Virginia, and in West Virginia.

B. H. (Bill) Jones, head of USDA's Packers and Stockyards Administration, said Baumert has since filed a $30,000 letter of credit which satisfies the bonding requirement.

The cease and desist order, similar to an injunction, was issued to insure future compliance with the Packers and Stockyards (P&S) Act

Formulating a swine ration is more than just meeting nutrient requirements. Your real goal is to produce hogs as cheap as you practically can. That doesn't mean you'll always be feeding for maximum performance. Instead you should be feeding for economical performance.

So how do you decide what ingredients to use? You might compare costs per bushel. But that gets you into trouble since grains have different bushel weights. You could, instead, compare costs per pound. That's a better method. But it's still not perfect since your feed will include many other ingredients besides the 2 or 3 you're comparing in cost.

Probably the simplest and most foolproof method is one that involves a few simple steps. First, formulate the new ration and calculate its cost. Compare that cost to your standard ration. Then decide whether the difference in cost will outweigh any changes in performance. This method works for energy ingredients. It works for protein ingredients. You can even use it for deciding on a feed additive.

Ingredient	Amount	Cost
Corn	1660 lbs	$ 74.41
Soybean Meal	290 lbs	$ 29 00
Vit Min	50 lbs	$ 15 00
	2000 lbs	$118 11

This ration contains 14% crude protein and 65% lysine and is based on corn at $2.50/bu., soybean meal at $200/ton and vitamin-mineral premix at $15/50 lbs.

Now suppose you'd like to make a switch to barley. Barley has more protein and lysine than corn. Unfortunately, the lysine in barley is not as digestible as it is in corn. So to be safe, substitute on a pound-for-pound basis. If barley is selling for $2.00/bu, the same ration (using barley instead of corn) will cost $113 16/ton.

Now you have to make a decision The barley ration is cheaper But the feed conversion won't be as good on barley So which is the better buy? Divide the cost of the corn ration into the cost of the barley ration. You get about 96% ($106.86/$118.11=96). The two feeds are within 4% in cost. Hog performance won't be that close, so you're better off with corn at these prices. To be competitive, the barley ration should be 90% of the cost of the corn ration or less.

What about wheat? Performance is very similar to that of corn. But the extra lysine in wheat will save you about 35 pounds of soybean meal per ton So the wheat ration will look like this (wheat at $2.80/bu):

Ingredient	Amount	Cost
Wheat	1695	$ 79 10
Soybean Meal	255	$ 25 50
Vit Min	50	$ 15 00
	2000	$119 60

So even though wheat saves some soybean meal, the final ration is still more expensive than your standard. So at these prices you're still better off with corn.

What about sorghum? The final ration cost should be no more than 90 to 95% of the cost of a corn ration to be competitive.

You can do the same thing with protein ingredients. For example corn distillers solubles may seem like a good buy at $140/ton. But they're very low in lysine (.9% vs 3 18% for soybean meal). Because of the low lysine, you might suggest putting in only 100 lbs per ton. Look what happens.

Ingredient	Amount	Cost
Corn	1590	$ 70 98
Soybean Meal	260	$ 26 00
Solubles	100	$ 7 00
Vit Min	50	$ 15 00
	2000	$118 98

This ration will have a .65% lysine, but it took a lot of soybean meal. So the overall cost is still higher than your corn ration even though you're using a protein source that doesn't cost much per ton.

What about feed additives? For example Lincomycin might add $28/ton to your feed cost. If your standard ration costs $118.11/ton, the new ration will be $146.11/ton. The new ration is about 24% more expensive ($146.11/$118.11=124%) Will this antibiotic increase performance by 24%? If you've got a problem with dysentery, it probably will But if your pigs are reasonably healthy and you're feeding the antibiotics for growth and feed efficiency, it's very unlikely that you'd get your money back.

So the bottom line in making any change from your normal ration is to figure the total cost of your new ration. Compare that cost to your standard cost. Then decide whether the expected change in performance will outweigh the cost.

Penn State offers swine AI course

UNIVERSITY PARK – Pork producers interested in learning how artificial insemination can fit into their program should register for an artificial insemination short course being offered by Penn State University.

Scheduled for Mar. 4 and 5, the course will feature presentations by Extension Swine Specialist Ken Kephart, Dairy and Animal Science professor Daniel Hagen and assistant swine herdsman David Hesterman. Also on the program will be semen handling expert Mary Pavelko of Eldora, Iowa

Participants looking for some hands-on training will be able to try their hand at insemination during Wednesday morning's practice session.

Though artificial insemination has been slow to catch on the swine industry, Ken Kephart notes that the technique can be justified on a limited basis in virtually any size herd. "The biggest advantage is being able to shut the doors completely to any live animal coming in," says the Extension specialist. Farmers using fresh semen will find that startup costs for equipment are minimal, he says.

With registration for the course due no later than Monday, Kephart urges interested producers to call 814-865-8301 for details

New Interest in Sheep Raising

With the opening of a new lamb processing facility in Timberville, Virginia, and an increased demand for finished lambs, sheep production is attracting new attention from Pennsylvania farm families. It is an especially attractive enterprise as an alternative source of income, use of forage, and utilization of vacant farm buildings.

Sheep raising does not involve expensive equipment or heavy labor, but it does take sufficient pasture and excellent fences – requirements that many small-farm operators may not be able to meet. In reality, there should be enough pasture to feed the sheep in spring, summer and fall, and still allow for frequent rotations to clean ground, encourage forage regrowth, or for separation of lambs from ewes.

Rotation helps protect sheep from internal parasites that can cause serious losses. Two acres of good pasture will provide feed for three to eight ewes for the summer months.

All pastures should be enclosed with a dog-proof fence. Such a fence combines woven and barbed wire and is 56 to 58 inches high. Several other fencing systems involving high tensile smooth wire and electrification are now being used with much success. The number of sheep you can properly care for on limited acreage will depend largely on how much well-fenced pasture you can provide.

Remember, do not get into sheep raising with the idea that sheep require little or no attention. Their needs are varied, and their habits are different from those of other farm animals. Ewes and lambs may require special care at lambing time. Feeding market lambs is different and more critical than finishing hogs or steers.

The beginner in sheep raising will probably find it best to choose one of the dual-purpose breeds that satisfactorily combines wool and lamb producing ability. You may want to consult your County Agricultural Agent or State Extension Sheep Specialist for help in selecting a breed to meet your needs, or for assistance in planning a sheep enterprise.

USDA takes action against Maryland meat firm

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The U.S. Department of Agriculture has ordered withdrawal of its meat inspection services for five years from a Maryland meat-packing company as a result of the firm's violations of the Federal Meat Inspection Act; however, the order will be held in abeyance as long as the company commits no further violations of a consent agreement between it and USDA.

"A USDA administrative law judge ordered the denial of inspection services Dec. 18 based on the conviction of James A. Fraley Jr., owner and operator of Rocko Meats retail food outlet of Thurmont, Md., of 47 counts of violating the Federal Meat Inspection Act between 1965 and 1976," said Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety Inspection Service. "At least 44 of the convictions were felony violations involving the illegal transportation, sale, and offer for sale of federally uninspected meat products with intent to defraud."

"The denial will not take effect as long as the company adheres to federal meat inspection laws and meets additional specified conditions listed in the consent order," said Houston.

Under federal law, USDA can deny inspection services to a meat or poultry plant if the company, or any official responsibly connected with the company, is convicted of any felony or more than one misdemeanor related to the handling of food.

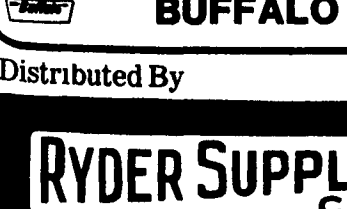
NEWARK, Del. – The use of medicated feed in swine production systems has played a large role in improving animal health, growth rate and feed efficiency over the past 30 to 40 years. Along with the benefits of feeding antibiotics, however, come several responsibilities. It is extremely important to observe all rules and regulations regarding antibiotic withdrawal times in order to avoid residues. Your obligations will vary depending on how you buy feed.

If you purchase complete feeds, most of the burden lies on the feed supplier. They must comply with FDA regulations, keep proper drug records, store the drugs properly, control drug carry-over, practice proper mixing procedures and follow drug label instructions. If you feed complete feeds you need to be concerned only with medicated feed carry-over in the feed handling equipment and observe the drug withdrawal times.

If you purchase a feed concentrate containing protein, vitamins, minerals and drugs to mix with your own grain, the supplier must still comply with the above regulations. It's up to you to supply proper storage for the medicated concentrates and follow mixing directions to obtain legal drug levels in the finished feed. In addition, you must take steps to avoid carry-over of medicated feed in your mixing equipment and must observe withdrawal times.



Your third choice is to buy a premix containing vitamins, trace-minerals and drugs and combine this with a protein supplement, grains and macro-minerals to make your own feed rations. In this case, more of the compliance burden is on you. The premix supplier must still meet all FDA regulations regarding drug premix production and labeling. But you as feeder must comply with FDA regulations on premix storage, inventory and usage records. In addition, you must make sure the drug premix is completely blended with the finished feed. And you must take care to avoid carry-over in the handling equipment and observe withdrawal times.

Mixer calibration is very important in getting a desired level of antibiotic in your feed. To avoid over- or under-feeding of antibiotics, calibrate your mixer weekly. Make sure no medicated feed remains in the mixing chamber to contaminate non-medicated feed mixed after a medicated batch. Remember that most violations involving drug residues involve non-compliance of withdrawal times and feed contamination during mixing and handling.

- Know the labeled uses, mixing instructions and withdrawal times for all medications used on your farm.
- Clean the mixer before use to avoid contamination with previous medicants.
- Don't exceed mixing capacities of equipment. Premix all medications into large enough quantities for accurate weighing and mixing. Where stationary mills are used, follow manufacturer's instructions on premixing and adding medications.
- Establish a mixing order for all ingredients. One recommended order is: (1) ½ of soybean meal or supplement; (2) medication and/or vitamin premixes; (3) ¼ of soybean meal or supplement–to flush premix into the mixer; (4) mineral premix; and (5) remainder of soybean meal or supplement. Mix thoroughly while grinding corn. Then add ground corn and mix for 8 to 10 minutes, or according to manufacturer's instructions.
- Ingredients can be measured by either volume or weight. But weight measurements are more accurate and should be used whenever possible. For volumetric mills, volumetric methods will give satisfactory results when regular calibrations are made. Follow recommendations of mill manufacturers.
- Whenever possible, mix in sequence all feeds containing medications. Then clean equipment before making nonmedicated feeds. Make finishing or withdrawal feeds after cleanup and before making up other non-medicated feeds.
- Clean out the mixer after medication use by flushing it with several hundred pounds of soybean meal or ground corn. Remove the flush, identify it properly and store it for use in a future medicated batch.
- Keep all medicants in a well-lit storage area with enough room to avoid clutter. Keep the original packages. And practice continual rodent and insect control. Never store insecticides and other farm chemicals in the same area as medications.
- Read all labels and observe withdrawal times.
- Periodically sample purchased premixes, supplements and finished feed from these ingredients. Label and hold these samples until 3 months after livestock fed these batches have been marketed.
- Clean out augers, holding bins, delivery wagons and feeders before mixing and moving withdrawal feed. Augers can be flushed with ground corn or other suitable material. Bins, wagons and feeders can be swept out. Do not put withdrawal feeds into bins or feeders with medicated feeds.

These recommendations came from two residue avoidance program fact sheets published by Iowa State University's Cooperative Extension Service. If you would like to receive copies of the "Feed Handling Systems" and "Feed Mixing Systems" fact sheets, feel free to call me at (302) 736-1448 or write me at: 300 S. New Street, Room 2206, Dover, DE 19901.

ASPC releases sheep shearing guidelines

DENVER, Colo. – American wool growers who take pride in sound management techniques during the year could still see their wool decline in value 25 percent or more if they do not apply good shearing practices. This is why industry leaders are waging a nationwide campaign asking producers to take extra care during this shearing season.

The "American Wool – Pack It With Pride" campaign is sponsored by the American Sheep Producers Council (ASPC), the National Wool Growers Association and the Sheep Industry Development Program. It is designed to reach the producer with both reminder and educational material about how to produce a better product for market.

ASPC President Tim Indart said he wants to see two overall results from the campaign: 1) A better wool clip, and 2) A more positive attitude taken by the textile industry toward American wool.

As part of the "Pack It With Pride" campaign, Indart is urging all producers to observe the following practices:

- Keep the sheep dry but don't overbed pens prior to shearing.
- To reduce wool stains and ease handling of sheep, keep sheep off feed and water for 12 hours before shearing.
- Have enough help to handle the sheep.
- Provide a clean, dry, well ventilated and lighted area for easier shearing and handling of wool.
- Plan a free, efficient movement of sheep to and from the shearers.
- Sweep floor after each fleece is removed to prevent tags, sweat locks, leg hair and double cuts from contaminating the next fleece.
- Select a shearer who has a reputation for pride in his work.
- When preparing wool for market, use only approved paper twine and burlap bags.
- Keep wool free of straw and manure.
- Separate tags, crutchings, floor sweepings, stained wool and package separately.
- Separate lamb wool from the balance of the clip.
- Shear white-face sheep first.

"Producers will be seeing the theme 'American Wool – Pack It With Pride' quite often this spring," Indart said. "Whenever they see it, I urge them to think about what they can do to join the effort to make our clip better. It really is a matter of pride."

Quakertown farmer wins use of tractor

C. Wilmer Mood of Windy Springs Farm, Quakertown was the winner in a special drawing that gives him free use of a Deutz-Allis tractor for 100 hours, through June 30, 1986. The drawing took place at the close of the "Meet Deutz-Allis — See What Sets Us Apart" program held recently. The event was sponsored by C. J. Wonsidler Bros. at R.D. 1, Quakertown.

According to Charles J. Wonsidler, the purpose of the meeting was to introduce area farmers to the Deutz-Allis Corporation — a new full-line farm equipment company resulting from the merger between Allis-Chalmers and Deutz-Fahr.

"Farmers are just naturally curious about what this new company means in terms of their own needs," said Charles J. Wonsidler. "The meeting was designed to address concerns they might have, and to focus on expanded product lines and service support brought about by the merger."

He cited a new tractor line powered by world-proven Deutz 3-cylinder air-cooled diesel engines, an advanced planter that can serve both present and future planting practices — everything from conventional tillage to minimum till to no till — plus the world's biggest and best selling line of haying equipment as examples of the expanded equipment line available from Deutz-Allis.

Film presentations were included in the program to further explain the role Deutz-Allis expects to play in serving the needs of North American farmers.

Buescher discusses farm economy at Ortho appreciation dinner

SMOKETOWN — The annual Ortho appreciation dinner meeting was held Feb. 17 at the Good 'n Plenty Restaurant in Smoketown. Sponsored by Chevron Chemical Company, manufacturer of Ortho Unipel fertilizer, and P.L. Rohrer and Bro., Inc., the dinner is given in appreciation to Ortho Unipel customers.

Ortho sales representative John Stimpert spoke briefly on conservation tillage. Stimpert covered the important features that conservation tillage offers to farmers, including reduced soil loss, increased productivity and increased moisture conservation.

Stimpert explained that all the above factors are critical to keeping crop production costs as low as possible. Since fertilizer application is very different than in conventional tillage systems, Stimpert noted that not every fertilizer material is suitable for no-till crop production.

Features such as stable nitrogen, low calcium carbonate equivalent, and early nutrient availability in a fertilizer will help a farmer be successful with a no-till system. Stimpert added that Ortho Unipel fertilizer, in addition to other production advantages, offers all the characteristics to make it well suited to no-till systems.

Following Stimpert's presentation, guest speaker Walt Buescher of Pigeon Forge, Tenn., centered on the economic farm problems in the United States. A background in sales and promotions in the farm equipment industry gives him insight into the farming situation.

The farm commodity price increased substantially from the early '70s until 1982. Since 1982, that index has been declining. Buescher cited the following reasons for the decline — declining farm exports, a strong U.S. dollar, world-wide recession and Russian grain embargoes.

These factors have resulted in feed grain surplus, Buescher said. Currently, the United States has approximately 1½ year's supply of corn, wheat and soybeans. Much of this grain would have been exported, he continued, but our share of world grain markets has been lost largely through government programs and embargoes.

Buescher said we have two choices to correct these surpluses and improve price indexes — cut back crop acreage and production, or reestablish eroded U.S. grain markets.

Buescher eliminated the first choice because it would create havoc throughout the entire U.S. economy, not just the agricultural economy. He suggested that a government program designed to cut crop acreage by 20 percent would result in the loss of 5 million jobs in this country.

The obvious solution, according to Buescher, is for farmers to become more effective marketers. Buescher then illustrated this point with several examples of organizations that were successful in marketing their agricultural commodities.

Buescher stressed that the farmer must become the marketer; the government cannot do it for him. He also encouraged the farmers to maintain their current level of production, thus keeping the door open for re-entry into world grain markets and increase sales within the United States through improved marketing efforts.

Carnation Milling sale to MannaPro completed

LOS ANGELES — Final documents have been signed concluding the sale of the Carnation Company's Milling Division to the newly-formed Manna Pro Corporation, headed by R. L. Young, President. According to Young, all operations will continue uninterrupted throughout the company's 13 Feed Mills, 38 Farm Supply Stores and Distribution Centers and 11,000 dealers nationwide.

Young, formerly Executive Vice-President of the Carnation Company's Milling Division, heads a group of Carnation executives involved in the transaction. Corporate management of the new company will rest mostly with individuals who have managed the division during the 80's to provide a continuity of fiscal, administrative and marketing expertise. The company will continue to be highly decentralized, with profit-center responsibility remaining with General Managers throughout the U.S. providing effective management response to local market conditions and efficient operations at each of the 13 Feed Mills. The company currently employs 950 specialists in marketing, manufacturing and distribution capacities, including 62 individuals at the York, PA Branch.

Jerry R. McLaughlin, Vice-President Operations, Eastern Region (formerly General Manager, York Branch) will head up the five profit center branches comprising the eastern 23 states. McLaughlin stated that a General Manager for the local York Branch, whose market area encompasses the ten (10) northeast states, will be named at a later date.

Manna Pro Corporation will maintain its world headquarters in Los Angeles, with Feed Mills, Regional Distribution Centers and Country Stores in 21 different states nationwide. York, PA will continue to serve as the headquarters for the Eastern Region for the present time.

Manna Pro Corporation, whose antecedents date back to 1842, will continue to manufacture and distribute a diversified line of animal and poultry feeds and farm supplies. The company's proprietary brands include Calf-Manna®, a nutritional supplement for all livestock, Suckle®, an instantized milk replacer for calves, Breakthrough®, a high energy horse feed supplement, and a number of special formulations that enjoy a substantial share of the multi-million dollar livestock feed market.

Jerry R. McLaughlin

"We look forward to the future of Manna Pro Corporation with a highly optimistic stance. Our forecasts indicate a growth in total protein consumption and demand over the next decade. Our commercial products already enjoy widespread preference among livestock and poultry producers, and should continue to grow, supported by research and development programs now in place. Our companion animal product business, which includes pet and horse feeds, continues to show strong increases and market penetration," said Young.

Baker elected president of fertilizer group

The following members were elected as officers: President — Wayne Baker (Cumberland Valley Cooperative); Vice President — Dana Ingerto (Farm Bureau Cooperative); Secretary — John Dantinne (Lancaster Bone Fertilizer Co.); and Treasurer — William E. Angstadt (Reading Bone Fertilizer Co.).

Past President, Art McAlister (York Stone and Supply Co.) was recognized by the membership for his outstanding contributions during his term in office.

In addition to the regular business meeting discussion and proceedings, The Inland Fertilizer Association was fortunate to engage Dr. Michael Rohn from Cargill as a guest speaker. Dr. Rohn is an economist for the fertilizer division of Cargill.

Dr. Rohn's presentation included discussion of international grain and fertilizer trade and their effort on domestic grain and fertilizer markets. Dr. Rohn also discussed the 1985 Farm Bill and its possible repercussions on the agricultural supply industry.

The membership of The Pennsylvania Inland Fertilizer Association appreciated the informative presentation by Dr. Rohn. We realize now, more than ever, that our businesses and lives are affected daily by global agriculture and trade.

Dr. David Brubaker from Penn Ag Industries Association, reported on several issues that are of current concern to the fertilizer industry. Dr. Brubaker first discussed problems that some companies are having obtaining liability insurance.

The Right to Know Law and changes in Pennsylvania Department of Transportation regulations were topics on which Dr. Brubaker also reported.

The Pennsylvania Inland Fertilizer Association meeting was followed by dinner and informal discussion. The next regularly scheduled meeting will be held in mid July.

Grain drying meeting scheduled in Lancaster

LANCASTER — Area farmers will have a chance to learn ways to increase their profits in corn production when grain experts gather in Lancaster on March 7.

The Grain Drying Conference, sponsored by Pennsylvania Power & Light Co. and the Pennsylvania Cooperative Extension Service, Southeast Region, will be held from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Lancaster Farm and Home Center, near the intersection of routes 30 and 72.

The main speaker will be Bruce McKenzie, professor of Agricultural Engineering at Purdue University, who will speak on energy-efficient drying of shelled corn and proper management of corn in storage. McKenzie has advised farmers across the country on grain drying and feed systems layout for more than 30 years.

Jon Carson, assistant professor of Agricultural Engineering at The Pennsylvania State University, will address the group on drying conditions in Pennsylvania, and he'll talk about safety.

Farmers interested in new markets for high-quality corn will benefit from a panel of local corn buyers who will describe their quality requirements. Panel members include representatives of a pet food company, a corn chip maker and a grain merchant.

The conference costs $5, which includes lunch. Registration for the conference should be made by Feb. 28. Forms can be obtained from county Cooperative Extension Service offices in southeastern Pennsylvania.

Hayes to speak on ridge tillage

CREAMERY — Bill Hayes, longtime agronomist with the Soil Conservation Service Mid-West Region will speak at 7:30 p.m. on Feb. 26, at the 4H Center in Creamery. Mr. Hayes is a nationally recognized expert on ridge tillage farming and is the author of "Minimum Tillage Farming" and "No-Tillage Farming".

Mr. Hayes will appear at a course being offered by the Cooperative Extension Service and the Montgomery Conservation District. The course will be opened to all farmers and individuals interested in hearing Mr. Hayes for that evening only.

"Montgomery County farmers have widely adopted No-Till Farming" according to Bill Steuteville, Course instructor. However, ridge farming, which is especially good for heavy wet soils such as are found in the county, is still untried here.

For further information, call the Conservation District at 489-4506.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Staying in business

There will be farmers around as long as people need to be fed. Family farms such as we have in much of Pennsylvania are still and probably always will be the most efficient types of farms. I firmly believe that we will have successful family farms in Pennsylvania for the rest of my lifespan and for a good deal longer than that.

The only unfortunate thing is that many of the good family farms in business today will no longer be able to compete in the food and fiber market tomorrow. However, this is no different than it has been in the past.

Since the beginning of time, the number of farmers in relation to the general population has declined. There has been the general exodus of farmers each year as new types of industry and business have opened.

There has also been the disaster type of exodus. The big depression of the '30s, the drought of the '60s, the flood in 1972, and more recently the credit crunch of the early '80s. This last one is still taking its toll on the farming community.

Despite adversities in the past, the farming community has always been able to pick itself up and go on (even if at times with a bloodied but unbowed head). Farmers in general will weather this series of setbacks as well.

Leading agriculture out of the present mess will be the ever present "family farm". Those who will be in the lead will be those who have learned a lesson from the recent disaster.

What Lessons?

Every disaster teaches a lesson or lessons to those who are willing and able to pay attention and learn. I remember the drought of the '60s. It caused the gap that separated the poor farmers from the average farmers and the average farmers from the good farmers to widen.

Those who learned from the drought, with its expensive feed and low crop production became better users of scarce resources. Some learned how to feed cows more efficiently. Some learned how to lime and fertilize more effectively. Some learned the value of a winter cover crop in conserving water.

Others learned how to do a more effective job of borrowing. The most useful things that those who prospered, despite the drought, learned was the value of records and the analysis of those records.

One lesson from this most recent disaster for the farming community is the responsible use of borrowed money. I would be the first to agree that not all of the present credit problem was due to irresponsible use of borrowed money.

After all who could project those spiraling interest rates of a few years ago? Or who could have projected the 20 to 30% drop in land value in much of Pennsylvania since the start of the '80s? However, those who want to remain in business over the next number of years will have to do whatever it takes to correct this situation, then go on from there.

Another lesson that farmers who stay in business may learn is that they may have to sell off assets in order to preserve their main assets.

One of the most difficult assests to sell is land that is right next door. Yet this may have to go if the farm is to continue as a business.

Perhaps a farmer will have to line up some long term leases on land rather than insist he or she has to own it all. Or perhaps that farmer will have to gear himself or herself to purchasing feed as opposed to growing it all.

I would agree that in some years growing it is cheaper than purchasing it. But remember this: A dairy livestock farmer may be just as far ahead to buy grain feed even when it is expensive because he could then put more time and effort into working with the animal enterprise. That could result in enough extra income to offset the extra cost of the feed.

The most difficult part of selling land is to sell it at a price that is less than it cost. People who buy and sell stocks get hung up on the same problem and some of them make a living buying and selling stocks.

Once when I was a prison farm guard, a habitual gambler told me that one of the big lessons in being a successful gambler was to know when to hang tough and when to fold up a hand. That same thing may well be true in life.

See The New Additions to The Deutz-Allis Line.

We're widening our line with two new additions. The 51 pto hp 6250 and 57 pto hp 6260 are powered by 3-cylinder direct air-cooled diesel engines. These skillfully engineered power plants have a world wide reputation for fuel economy and efficiency, low maintenance, and dependable long-life performance.

Choose from two-wheel drive or traction-grabbing all-wheel drive for added efficiency. A 12-speed transmission is standard with 8 forward speeds and 4 reverse. Plus high-performance hydraulics, 3-point hitch and 540-rpm pto. A front hitch and pto are also available for greater efficiency and versatility with front mounted implements.

Stop by for a look at our two newest additions.

NO MORE PROMISES.

But try to hold it...keep it, and it disappears.

Farm equipment companies have made too many promises to their dealers. And the economy and mergers have meant that a lot of those promises couldn't be kept. We've changed, too. But while some companies continue to make promises, White Farm has learned that the only way to gain your trust and your business is to stand on the quality of our products.

You'll get quality equipment, not promises. We have a new owner. One that has experience through Bush Hog, Kewanee and New Idea. Allied Products Corporation is investing its funds and its future in farm equipment.

With their support, we'll earn your business by supplying you with quality tractors, planters and tillage equipment. And we'll support the line with a strong parts system and an attentive finance division.

What we do is more important than what we say. The proof of our commitment is rolling off the production line right now. We're restructuring to give you more access to decision makers. We're shifting production to increase plant volume, maintain quality and stay competitive. And we're always learning more about what you need to keep profitable.

Others promise that you'll benefit from their changes But we'll prove that your future looks best with the unchangeable quality and value of White Farm.

AUCTIONEER NOTE:

The Zanieski family farmed here in Cutchogue since the turn of the century. Through their love and dedication for farming, they have continuously accumulated and upgraded their equipment. Their equipment is in beautiful condition because it has only worked in the rich, porous, easily tilled soil that predominates this area.

Take the time to come, see and buy, all in one day which has taken this fine family a century to build.

New Farm Bill to boost exports

WASHINGTON — Newly enacted trade promotion programs have given the administration tools which — if used effectively — could help American agriculture regain lost overseas markets, Chairman Kika de la Garza, D-Tex., of the House Agriculture Committee said.

The new provisions are part of the 1985 omnibus farm bill which became law in late December. They include export credit programs as well as provisions for using government surplus stockpiles as a form of export subsidy to make American crops more competitive on world markets. They law also extends the Food for Peace program and expands other programs to move American crops to needy people abroad. In addition, it sets up a new Food for Progress authority to promote private enterprise policies in developing food production for home consumption in developing countries.

Another major feature of the farm bill which could lead toward improved export trade is its shift toward a more market-oriented system of linking commodity price support loan rates to conditions in world markets, de la Garza noted.

"But reversing the declines of recent years in export sales of farm products will take time, and the degree of success we have will depend partly on international economic trends and policies in other countries," de la Garza said.

"New U.S. export policies are not, by themselves, a total answer to our current troubles in agriculture. But if we are going to begin moving out of the current farm depression, part of the solution must be more export trade. I hope the administration will use the new tools Congress has provided as part of a carefully planned, coordinated and forceful export expansion program," the Chairman added.

"I also hope that in whatever is done, the administration will follow the new six-point declaration of national trade policy Congress wrote into the 1985 farm bill — the first basic agricultural trade policy statement Congress has adopted," de la Garza said. "This policy charter should make it clear to the world that we intend to counter unfair trade practices, but that at the same time we want to do all we can to avoid destructive trade wars and to promote fair competition."

The policy declaration says U.S. agricultural trade policy should:

- Provide by all possible means for the export of farm products at competitive prices.
- Support the principle of fair trade.
- Cooperate in all efforts to negotiate reductions in barriers to fair trade.
- Counter aggressive unfair trade practices by all available means.
- Remove foreign policy constraints which hamper agricultural trade.
- And provide for the consideration of U.S. agricultural trade interests in the design of overall national fiscal and monetary policy.

Here are some of the key trade features of the farm bill.

EXPORT EXPANSION: This includes an export bonus program under which government-owned surplus commodities will be "provided to United States exporters, users, processors, and foreign purchasers, at no cost, to encourage the development, maintenance and expansion of export markets..." The Secretary of Agriculture is directed to use commodity export assistance, to the extent necessary, for purposes including countering subsidies paid by other nations, compensating for U.S. commodity support loan rates which are temporarily above competitive levels and offsetting fluctuations in the value of the dollar. The law requires that not less than $2 billion in commodities must be used in the program through Sept. 30, 1988.

The Secretary is directed to "seek" to devote 15 percent of export program outlays annually (in cash or commodities) to expand export sales of poultry, meat and meat products, and he would be encouraged to use the program to expand sales of processed or high-value farm commodities.

EXPORT CREDIT: The law requires the Secretary of Agriculture, through fiscal 1990, to make available guarantees of not less than $5 billion a year in short-term (up to three years) export credits. The Secretary is also required in another section of the law to use not less than $325 million in cash or government-owned surpluses annually (on top of all other export programs in the new law) for "targeted" export activities to counter the subsidies, import quotas or unfair trade practices of other countries. The law also broadens an existing program of loans for intermediate-term (three to 10 year) export credit by allowing these loans to cover the general purpose of promoting farm exports, and the Act authorizes guarantees as well as direct loans. The Secretary would be told to make at least $500 million a year available in intermediate credit guarantees through fiscal 1988 and at least $1 billion in each of the fiscal years 1989 and 1990; he would also be encouraged to use the program to help countries graduate from the Food for Peace long-term credit program. Further, the bill extends authority for creation of an agricultural export credit revolving fund through fiscal 1990.

CARGO PREFERENCE: The bill classifies a number of specified agricultural export programs as exempt from the cargo preference laws under which some commodity shipments must be carried on American-flag vessels. In return, the new law increases the American-flag share of preference-covered Food for Peace and similar aid shipments from the current 50 percent to 60 percent in calendar 1986 and to 75 percent by 1988, with funding for the amounts over 50 percent coming from the Department of Transportation instead of the Agriculture Department. If the Secretary of Transportation cannot provide the required extra funding, the previous law would come back into effect.

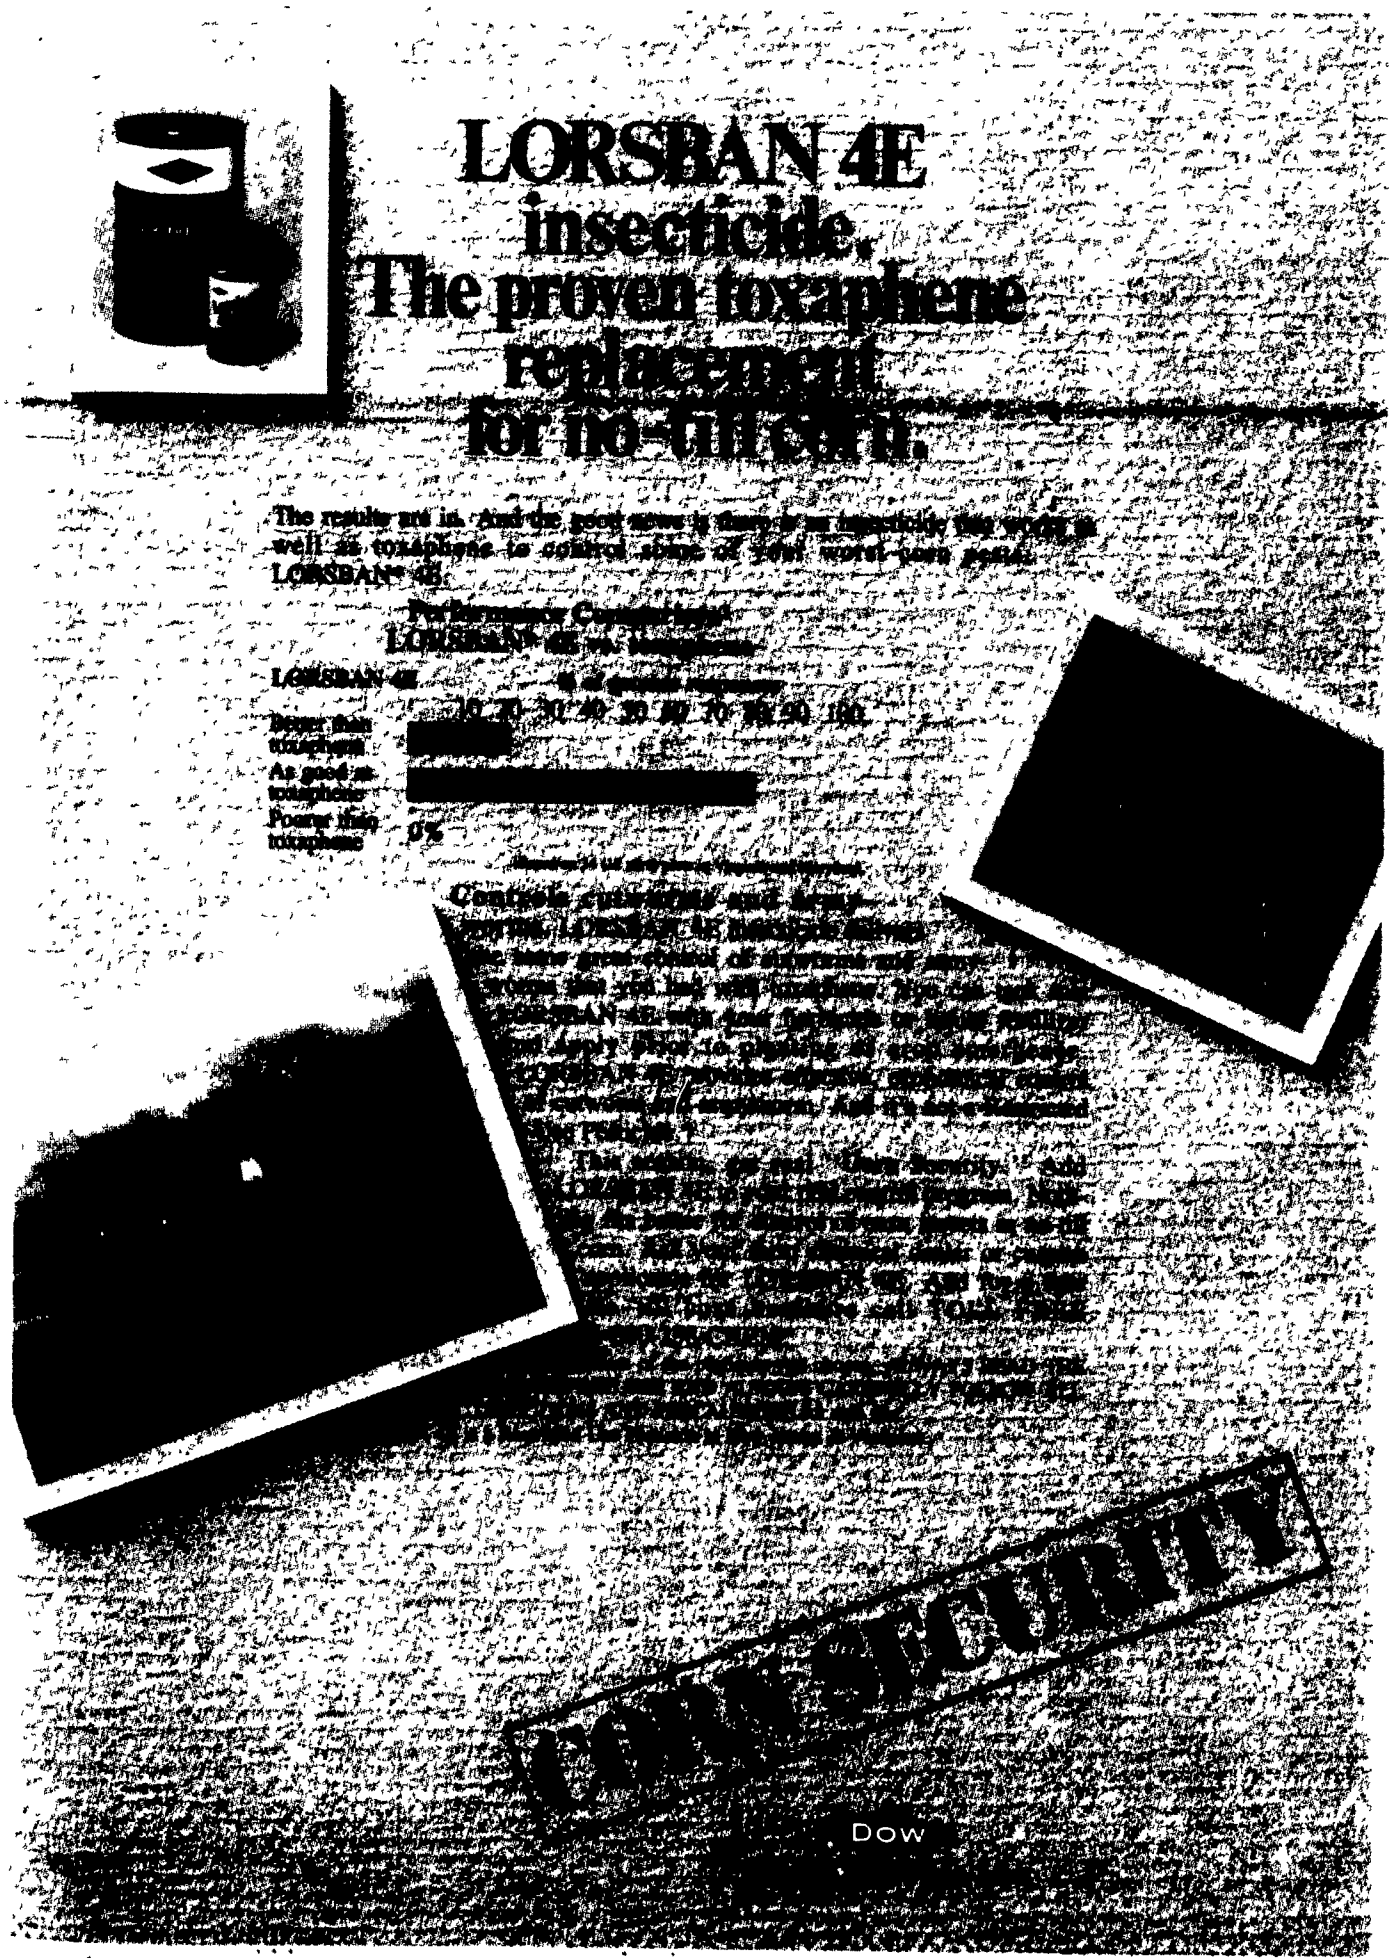
FOOD FOR PEACE & OTHER AID: The legislation extends the Food for Peace program for five years, and the President is given authority to waive the legal $1 billion annual ceiling on authorization for grant shipments under the program if necessary to meet humanitarian needs. Also, the ceiling on grant shipments (Title II of Public Law 480) is raised to 1.9 million tons annually. The bill also includes provisions under which private voluntary agencies distributing U.S. food abroad under section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949, could sell part (at least 5 percent) of the food donated by USDA to help pay for distribution within host countries. The law broadens the commodities eligible for section 416 donation (currently limited to dairy products and wheat) to include other grains, oilseeds, and any other edible products acquired by the government. Further, the law sets up a Food for Progress program under which developing countries would be given bonus commodities to help them adopt policies promoting private, free-enterprise agricultural development. In addition, the law authorizes the use of foreign currencies generated by PL480 to make loans to promote private-enterprise agricultural growth in developing countries — but not for producing commodities that would compete with American products.

EXPORT EMBARGOES: The bill states that it is the policy of the U.S. not to use export embargoes except where the President declares a national emergency under the Export Administration Act and that contracts in existence when an embargo is declared should be exempt from the export restriction.

OTHER PROVISIONS: The law creates a new post, Special Assistant to the President for Agricultural Trade and Food Aid. The new assistant would advise and help the president in a broad range of policy covering both trade and overseas aid.

The Act requires a study of the impact of imports of Brazilian ethanol on American grain producers and processors and calls for a report on what relief should be granted to the American ethanol industry.

The law requires the Secretary to set up pilot programs with at least two countries using barter to acquire strategic materials for government stockpiles. Also, the Secretary is required to sell not less than 150,000 tons of surplus dairy products annually through fiscal 1988 but to avoid interference with normal marketings.



Tallman's business interests up in the air

BY STEVE BERGER
Staff Correspondent

DAUPHIN – John Tallman, the owner-operator of Tallman Aerial Spraying in Dauphin, Pa. has quite a story to tell. The son of George Tallman, a 50-year potato grower from Tower city in Schuylkill County, John resides on his farm-airport with his wife Ruth who is employed as the Executive Director of the Dauphin County ASCS.

John's background and preparation for his business are extensive. A graduate from Penn State with a B.S. in agriculture, he served seven years in the U.S. Air Force and Air National Guard as a pilot. In 1976 he returned home to Tower City to resume his duties on his family's large potato farm.

His job had been in part to handle the spraying of the potato and tomato crop. A group of intriguing business circumstances led to the purchase of his first spray plane: Between John's father, four brothers, and brother in law, they were farming 400 acres of potatoes and 150 acres of tomatoes.

Both of these crops are sprayed as often as once a week which often amounts to a total of ten or more sprayings per growing season.

What this meant is that close to 6,000 acres had to be covered during a season occupying two ground rigs full time to keep up with it all.

The problem was further complicated by the fact that going over the same crop ten times can lead to extensive leaf damage and stress from root compaction.

Wet field conditions multiplied the damage and frequently made timely spraying impossible. Add to all this the fact that one of the ground sprayers needed to be replaced and one member of the family was qualified to operate aerial spraying equipment, and what resulted was the purchase of John's first spray plane.

Some ten years later, John is still in the pilot's seat. Tallman Aerial Spraying now operates independently in Dauphin, serving customers throughout central Pennsylvania as well as neighboring states. The recent construction by the Morton Company of a hangar for the two 400 H.P. Piper Brave ag aircraft has made the operation self-contained.

What advantages to aerial spraying have made this enterprise grow? Speed and timeliness of application regardless of field conditions, no leaf damage or soil compaction from wheel tracks and ease of application to tall crops keep Tallman Aerial Spraying in demand.

March, April, and May are the main months for application of liquid and granular fertilizer on wheat, barley, and rye crops. May and June see extensive spraying of private and state forest land where attack by the gypsy moth are imminent.

In the air, application of forest sprays can amount to 12 acres of forestland covered per minute. At this time aerial spraying is the only effective way to control the gypsy moth which has succeeded in defoliating millions of acres of forest land. Penn's Woods are among the notable victims.

June and July witness the application of granular insecticide for corn borer as well as fungicide and insecticide spraying of vegetable and field crops. Field crop and vegetable work move through August and September with the main crops covered being potatoes, tomatoes, sweet corn, squash and beans.

Late August and September see interseeding of small grain cover crops in standing corn and soybeans; usually rye, wheat, hairy vetch, or rye grass. Much of the interseeding is used for cover crops in a no til rotation or for ensiling prior to corn planting. John personally farms 400 acres in a three-to-one corn and soybean rotation. By this time you might well ask, "how can one man do so much." Of course he doesn't. John was joined forces by Mr. Floyd Wertz, a high school classmate and friend of twenty years. A member of Tallman Aerial Spraying since 1976, Floyd handles work on the ground and engineers pit stops during applications. The crew is supplemented by young local help.

All of this carefully orchestrated expertise makes the process effective and economical. For example: the interseeding process can use combine-run seed allowing farmers to use homegrown seed after it is run through an auger wagon trucked to the loading site and operated by Floyd. Spray mixing and loading tanks are also trucked to the site eliminating the need for this equipment by customers. Aircraft and ground equipment are radio equipped. The customer is provided with a portable radio to ease communication of work instructions.

Aerial spraying is a closely regulated industry coming under the scrutiny of the EPA. Applications are made during winds of less than five to ten MPH and the aircraft is equipped to release smoke puffs to predict drift and paper streamers to mark swath runs: eliminating operation when necessary. Field work is done with the aircraft flying less than ten feet from the tops of crops. Forest work is done around 50 feet above tree tops. Applicators need to be federally as well as state licensed. John Tallman has performed more than 3,000 hours of this highly specialized work accident free.

NE growers eye greenhouses

CREAMERY – More and more vegetable growers in the Northeast have been expanding their farming operation from the field into the greenhouse, according to Doyle W. Grenoble, research associate in The Pennsylvania State University's Department of Horticulture.

At the same time, says Penn State's extension fruit tree specialist Robert Crassweller, fruit growers are facing new options and problems because of the controversial growth regulators used for tree fruits.

The growing bedding plant industry as well as developments with fruit tree growth regulators will be addressed at the upcoming Pennsylvania specialists from Penn State, industry representatives, growers and other university specialists will offer workshops on the latest developments and research into the growing and marketing of fruit and vegetables.

More than 1,000 growers from the Northeast are expected to attend the conferences, as well as industry representatives who will be sponsoring a trade show. Registration is through either the Pennsylvania Vegetable Growers Association or the State Horticultural Association of Pennsylvania.

For more information on the program contact your Penn State County Cooperative Extension Office.

Foraging Around

By Dr. John E. Baylor
Director of Market Development
Beachley-Hardy Seed Company

Compounding Forage Mixtures

Based on questions asked at Farm Show, many forage producers still have concerns when putting together forage mixtures for use on their farms, including how much seed of each species to use. In this month's column I'll take another look at the things you should consider when selecting the species that will make up the mixture for a particular use.

First, let's consider several of the more obvious. Some species are more sensitive than others to soil acidity, marginal drainage, low fertility and intensive cutting or pasture management. Likewise, some species can be expected to live longer than others and are more winter hardy. And, of course, species also mature at different times.

Species also differ in their seed characteristics such as size and shape as well as seedling emergence, early seedling vigor and general ability to compete during the establishment year. The latter is sometimes referred to as seedling aggressiveness.

All of the above factors should be considered when selecting species for a mixture for a particular site or use.

Seedling Aggressiveness

Let's zero in a little closer on what I've referred to as seedling aggressiveness. As suggested above, seedling aggressiveness is a combination of speed of germination and emergence and the ability of the seedlings to compete.

For example, of the legumes, red clover is generally considered most aggressive followed by sweet clover, alfalfa and alsike clover, ladino clover, birdsfoot trefoil and crownvetch.

Perennial ryegrass tops the aggressiveness list of the perennial cool-season grasses and is followed in order by orchardgrass, tall fescue, bromegrass, timothy, reed canarygrass and kentucky bluegrass.

Thus, the ideal when selecting species for a mixture is to combine those that are similar in aggressiveness.

Maturity Important, Too

For a quality forage the species and varieties in a mixture should also mature at approximately the same time. If there is to be a tolerance in maturity for either species it should be for the grass component which can be of later maturity than the legume. Thus, if the legume is cut when it is ready the grass will be at an early leafy stage and, thus, will make a higher quality forage.

Simple or Complex Mixtures

If we keep in mind all of the factors mentioned above, we can make a good argument for either simple (one legume and one grass) or complex (many legume and grasses) mixtures. After all, if you have a wide range of soil, climatic and management conditions within a given sward, it seems logical that the more species you include the more likely something will survive.

The fact is that if you choose species on the basis of suitability and adaptation to the environment under which they are to be grown, there is no need to put together complex mixtures. Furthermore, it is difficult to manage complex mixtures since the mangement system that suits one species may be harmful to another. Thus, proper management of a complex mixture is almost impossible. Under a given system of management, even if you start out with many species in a mixture, after a short time only a few survive.

Furthermore, many experiments have shown that complex mixtures do not yield any more than simple mixtures. Thus, a simple mixture of two forage species, one a legume and the other a grass, that are well adapted and matched, is easier to manage and generally more satisfactory.

About Seeding Rates

Finally, let's consider seeding rates for the various species in a mixture. Of course, the over-all rate of seeding is a function of seeding method; the more precise your seeding technique is in terms of seed placement, the less seed is needed per unit area.

But the amount of seed of each species in the mixture should be based on a knowledge of the seed characteristics listed earlier, including seed size and shape and seedling aggressiveness.

For example, in an alfalfa-grass mixture you'll need 10-12 pounds of alfalfa with either 3 pounds of orchardgrass, 6-8 pounds of perennial ryegrass, 8 pounds of bromegrass, about 4 pounds of timothy, or 6 pounds of reed canarygrass. On the other hand, in a birdsfoot trefoil-grass mixture you would go with about 6 pounds of trefoil per acre, but since trefoil is less aggressive you would stay away from aggressive grasses or cut the seeding rate back.

Seed mixtures and seeding rates for various soil situations and forage uses are detailed in your State University's Agronomy Guide as well as in other seed guides. Look these over before trying to make up seeding mixtures on your own.

Ag Week TV special to appear on 135 stations

CHICAGO – "Of Stars and Farmers," the National Agriculture Week television special, airs on some 135 television stations nationwide, during National Agriculture Week, March 14-20, 1986.

This is the fifth consecutive year Elanco Products Company is presenting the television special on agriculture. Other sponsors of the special include: Ford Tractor Operations, Ford Motor Company, and Ford Truck.

Noted farm broadcaster Ray Wilkinson will narrate "Of Stars and Farmers" which compares the stories of real-life farmers to their "Hollywood" counterparts from the movies "Country" and "The River."

National Cattlemen's Association president Jo Ann Smith talks about how the beef industry must change to meet the challenge of the future; Dick and Magie Roberts, Chillicothe, Missouri, discuss their fight to stay in farming; Steven Heitshusen, Williamsburg, Iowa, explains why he wants to get on a farm of his own, despite two major setbacks he experienced as he was just beginning his farming career.

The 1986 National Agriculture Week television special uses celebrities and film clips because "Hollywood" attracts attention. Recent examples are the "Farm Aid" concert, Congressional hearings, and the release of several farm-oriented movies, according to program producers.

NCA President

Like Jewell Ivy in the movie "Country," Jo Ann Smith organizes people–but toward the goal of promoting the beef industry.

According to Jo Ann, in order to change American's attitude about beef, the product itself must change and is, in fact, changing. As a result, Americans now enjoy a leaner beef product that fits well into any lifestyle.

Jo Ann says the beef that Americans consume today, ounce for ounce, contains no more cholesterol and calories than poultry. In addition, there is the benefit of iron and zinc needed for a balanced diet. Jo Ann adds, "The beef industry is looking forward to a national check-off program to develop more new products to meet the lifestyle and the convenience that consumers want today. We in the beef industry want to deliver the product the consumer wants.

Jo Ann has a positive outlook for the future of the beef industry. "We have to become more competitive with our product...we have to meet the convenience the consumer wants. Never before in history has there been such an opportunity for cattlemen."

Off-farm solutions

Mel Gibson of "The River," was forced to take an off-farm job that separated him from his family in order to make ends meet. For Magie and Dick Roberts, that story is real.

In 1982 the Roberts' computer showed they would have to borrow money to pay interest. That led them to make a decision: sell-out, or fight to keep the farm. They decided to fight.

In order to save the farm, the Roberts family set goals, follows a strict budget and Magie Roberts takes a teaching job, off-the-farm, in Fulton Missouri, to help make ends meet. She commutes two and one-half hours by car to visit her family on the farm each weekend. But it pays off. The Roberts have their farm today.

Magie Roberts reminds viewers that agriculture is responsible for one of five jobs today. And if the farmers are not allowed to remain in farming, low food prices will be a thing of the past. "We have lost a lot of our car industry, we've lost a lot of our steel industry, and as a nation agriculture's what we do best and if we're not careful, we'll lose that too."

Roots run deep

Someday Hollywood may want to make a movie about Steven Heitshusen, but for now, his story is still in the making.

Steven's farming career begins with a rocky start in 1983 when 600 hogs suffocated due to a power loss in his hog confinement building.

To off-set his loss, Steven decided to raise more corn and not go into the PIK program. "But nature turned on the microwave in July and August, and my yields were 45 bushels an acre short of being average. Which was a disaster when it didn't pay my bills."

Ignoring advice from his attorneys to declare bankruptcy, Steven takes a part-time job as a commodity broker to supplement his income and cuts back on expenses by using options rather than paying for grain storage.

The come-back for Steven Heitshusen has been, and still is, an uphill climb but that won't stop Steven, "No one else made me be a farmer and with that I want to assume all the risk myself." His story is a good example of the courage and fortitude farmers are showing today in the face of formidable obstacles.

Forum for farmers

"Of Stars and Farmers" airs during National Agriculture Week, March 14-20, 1986 on some 135 stations across the nation.

Previous National Agriculture Week specials have been well received by farmers and city residents. In past surveys, farmers have been supportive of the television specials and feel they are an effective means for sponsors to invest advertising dollars.

"National Agriculture Week gives us this important, annual occasion to build awareness of our most basic industry," says Vaughn D. Bryson, president, Elanco Products Company. "We feel it's important to take full advantage of this opportunity and are pleased to provide a forum for farmers to communicate on their own behalf."

Aerial photos available from U.S. Geological Survey

RESTON, VA – People who want to see what Pennsylvania looks like from 40,000 feet in the air can do so by using photographs from the National High Altitude Photography program coordinated by the U.S. Geological Survey.

High-altitude photographs produced under the NHAP program and available to the public from the USGS clearly depict, in either color-infrared or black-and-white, 90 percent of the state's 45,333 square miles of land and water areas. Each color-infrared photo shows an area of about 68 square miles and each black-and-white photo depicts about 130 square miles.

Even from 40,000 feet, features as small as houses and boats are distinguished because of the quality and high resolution of the NHAP photographs, said John Wood, chief of the National Cartographic Information Center at the USGS National Center in Reston, Va.

Larger features such as airfields, parks, large buildings, highways, lakes and streams are easily identifiable. For example, the NHAP photo of the Pittsburgh area clearly shows Point State Park, the Civic Arena and Three Rivers Stadium.

Wood said that under the multi-agency cooperative NHAP program, more than 87 percent of the area in the 48 conterminous states has been photographed, and complete coverage of the 48 states is expected by the end of 1986. Federal agencies that contribute to the program include the departments of Agriculture, Defense, Commerce and Interior and the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The high quality of NHAP photographs is the result of exposing film in precision aerial cameras during near-optimum weather and seasonal conditions, plus the application of stringent inspection and processing procedures before the USGS accepts the photographs from aerial surveying and mapping contractors.

Photographs produced under the program are intended primarily for mapping, scientific research, and resource and land-use planning purposes, but Wood said they can also appeal to people who want high-altitude views of their homes, farms, neighborhoods or other favorite spots. The photographs can be useful additions to map collections and make attractive wall hangings.

Prints of the high-altitude photographs are available in standard 9-by-9-inch size, with enlargements available in sizes ranging up to 36-by-36 inches. Costs are $5 for a 9-by-9-inch black-and-white print, $15 for a 9-by-9-inch color-infrared print, and up to $70 for a 36-by-36-inch color-infrared enlargement. Also available are photographic prints enlarged to 1:24,000 scale to match 1:24,000-scale topographic maps for the same areas. Costs are $25 for a black-and-white print and $50 for a color-infrared print.

The black-and-white and color-infrared photographs are taken at an altitude of 40,000 feet above the ground with two 9-by-9-inch-format aerial cameras. A 6-inch focal-length camera loaded with black-and-white film produces photographs at a scale of 1 80,000 (one inch on a photograph represents about 1 25 miles on the ground). Photographs from an 8 25-inch focal-length camera loaded with color-infrared film are at a scale of 1·58,000 (one inch represents almost 1 mile).

A schedule of prices and assistance in ordering NHAP black-and-white and color-infrared photographs for areas in Pennsylvania are available from the NCIC, U S. Geological Survey, 507-A National Center, Reston, Va 22092, telephone 703-860-6336. Mail orders must be accompanied by checks or money orders payable to the Department of the Interior-USGS.

The NCIC also has information on other high-altitude photographs and maps of Pennsylvania at various scales, as well as other cartographic data pertaining to the state.

Agents tribute to Klingers

BY THOMAS E. PIPER
Extension Agent
Adams County

YORK SPRINGS – The recipients of the extension leadership recognition award for 1985 have made significant contributions to the agriculture/4-H and family life of Adams County for nearly 40 years. It is a special privilege to relate some of the accomplishments of the recipients, Charles and Martha Klinger, 365 Five Points Road, New Oxford.

Charlie Klinger came to Adams County in the fall of 1946 as a DHIA milk tester. Just back from military service as a fighter pilot, Charlie was eldest child in a family of eight. He had grown up on a small farm near Sunsbury where his father worked as a painter

Charlie met Martha Martin, a daughter of A.B. Martin (and one of 9 children) in 1948 on a blind date arranged by Tom Murren. Tom was to become best man at their wedding in 1952 about a year after Martha had graduated from Shippensburg State Teachers College.

They bought the former Guise farm just east of what is now the Penn Quality Egg Farm, Heidlersburg, and started farming in 1952 with six cows and 3 heifers on 103 acres of poorly drained land which had a track record for keeping tenants for one year tenure. The neighboring Frankenfield farm of 133 acres purchased in 1955 provided more of the same. They started out with Ayrshires, the basis for their Kling-Ayr prefix, but converted to Holsteins about 1960.

It was about this time that the Klingers became one of 10 Adams County families to be enrolled as cooperators in the extension service/Tennessee Valley Authority joint demonstration program in farm management and crop yield improvement. They credit this project which continued for about 5 years with showing them "How we could take a wet, run-down farm and make it productive" to quote Charlie. Working closely with the county agent and extension specialists in agronomy, farm management, dairy and family living, the program emphasized soil testing and use of recommended practices to make farming more profitable.

In support if this program, the Klingers signed on as cooperators with the Adams County Conservation District and and set about to improve the land. They have installed about 54, 195' of open drains, 10, 195' of sub-surface drains, 2, 157' of diversion ditches or sod waterways and had the entire farm of 190 acres laid out for strip cropping on the contour with open ditches or bedding strips between. These practices effectively drained the land making it possible to farm at the critical seasons of the year and to realize benefit of fertilizers applied.

In the interest of improving the dairy herd, Charlie has kept the herd enrolled in DHIA for some 38 years, ever since he started farming. He takes pride in the fact that he had the highest producing herd in the county in 1982 when his average was 21,138 pounds of milk, 750 pounds of fat He can be equally proud of the trophy he received for the lowest somatic cell count in the county for 1985, recognition for good herd health and high quality milk

FIRST CHOICE FOR CONSERVATION TILLAGE.

Bicep is a single formulation herbicide that provides season-long control of broadleaf weeds and grasses because of its unique combination of chemical properties.
Good solubility*—a little moisture carries Bicep into the weed and grass germinating zone.
Excellent Adsorption*—once in the weed germinating zone, Bicep adheres to soil particles, providing season-long control.

In many cases Bicep is less expensive than tank mixes, with better results. One application is all you need for clean fields all season long. With no tank mixing. No hassle. And best of all, no weeds or grasses.

Bicep. Make it your first choice for cleaner fields in conservation tillage. CIBA–GEIGY

Potato chipping seminar slated

DENVER, CO – Potato growers, chip manufacturers and researchers from across the country will meet at the Westin Hotel-Copley Place in historic Boston for the National Chipping Potato Seminar, Feb. 27 - March 1, 1986.

The annual educational event is designed specifically for manufacturers and growers who sell potatoes to the snack food industry.

Over fifteen researchers, manufacturers and growers are scheduled to speak on a variety of subjects including "Developments in Field, Equipment and Warehouse Sanitation", "Processing Issues - Proper Receiving/Handling for Quality Chips" and "Chip Color and Agtron Readings."

During roundtable discussions following each presentation period, registrants will meet with the speakers for one-on-one advice and questions.

The seminar will open on Feb 27 with a Frito-Lay plant tour and a welcome reception. Following a day-and-a-half of informative presentations, the seminar will close on March 1

"The National Chipping Potato Seminars allow growers the opportunity to learn the latest research findings and marketing tips as well as to share their problems and successes with peers and experts," Bob Smith, Administrator of the National Potato Foundation, said.

Seminar registration is $125 (before Feb. 1, 1986) and $140 (after Feb 1, 1986) The registration fee inlcudes a seminar proceedings book, Thursday afternoon tour to Frito-Lay plant near Killingly, Conn., Friday breaktast, lunch and dinner at Pier 4, Saturday breakfast, refreshment breaks and informative lectures and presentations.

Spouses and children (under 18) are invited to attend the educational seminar at no additional registration charge (Additional meal tickets, however, will be required)

On Feb. 28, a special tour of the historic sections of Boston, including a visit to the Old North Church and Old Ironsides, will be available to spouses and children for an additional $15

Special convention hotel room rates of $75 single or double are available for all registrants. Also, special discounts of up to 45 percent off coach fares on Northwest Orient Airlines and Bar Harbor have been secured for all registrants.

Following the Chipping Potato Seminar, March 1 - 8, attendees and other interested potato growers are invited to participate in a tour of Ireland.

"The Potato Foundation is offering potato growers the chance to learn about the history and future of potatoes in Ireland," Dan Hall, Executive Director of the National Potato Council and Foundation, said "The trip includes a full agenda of business and social activities including a visit to the Blarney Stone and a meeting with growers from the Irish Farming Association"

For more information on the Chipping Potato Seminar, contact the National Potato Foundation, 4685 Peoria St., Suite 101, Denver, CO 80239 (303) 373-5639. Reservations for the Ireland Tour should be made with Joan O'Leary at Commercial Travel Associates, 1-800-922-1337.

The National Chipping Potato Seminar is cosponsored by the National Potato Council's National Potato Foundation and the Potato Chip/Snack Food Association in cooperation with the Maine Potato Industry and the Red River Valley Growers Association Several companies and growers have helped to sponsor various activities at the seminar forced him to more mechanization on the farm - to self unloading silos an automatic manure scraper in the heifer barn, and pipeline milkers

With his background in DHIA, Charlie was called on by his fellow-dairymen to serve about 24 years on the board of directors where he usually served as secretary treasurer He also served 12 years on the extension executive committee, a year and a half on the conservation district board and 3 years on the advisory council of the Emaculate Conception Church in New Oxford. Charlie was named outstanding young farmer by the Jaycees in 1957, and was presented a district award by the Pennsylvania Young Farmers in 1978. A group in which he has served for many years he's also a member of the Farmers Association.

Having taught at the Harris Park Elementary School in Harrisburg for 4 years and in York Springs for a year, Martha took an 8 year leave to raise two lovely daughters before returning to teach in the first grade at East Berlin for some 22 years.

While the girls were growing up, Martha served as a leader in the Hunterstown - New Chester 4-H club for 10 years and for a time was active with the Harrisburg road and New Chester Homemaker Clubs. She has always been active with the P.T.O. (Parent Teachers Organization) and supported education association work at local/state/national levels. The family at one time hosted an IFYE from India and a teacher from Bogota.

The Klingers are proud of their two daughters, both of whom worked hard in spare time on the farm. Elaine, born in 1956, graduated from Shippensburg University, did graduate work at Penn State and served 5 years in store management for Agway in Chambersburg, New Jersey and Dublin, Pennsylvania. She is married to James L. Gilbert, resides near York Springs, is mother of a 5 month old son, Vincent, and does some substitute teaching.

Mary Ann, born in 1958, graduated from Indiana University of Pennsylvania. She was manager of a fabric shop then served three years as an extension home economist before marrying Bill Oyler and setting up housekeeping in an Adams County orchard. She is currently coordinator for the Adams County Cancer Society.

Both girls were chosen as Dairy Princess in Adams County: Elaine in 1974; Mary Ann in 1976. Just as they have supported the dairy industry, so have they volunteered time and talent in support of the county 4-H club program, coaching teams for state days, serving as project leaders. Elaine was just recently elected president of the board of directors, 4-H clubs of Adams County Inc.

When you need to be inspired by a true life example of courage to overcome adversity; by the value of the work ethic and the rewards of persistence; by the benefits of learning and applying new technology and sound land management and farming practices; and of the inspiration, leadership training and skills to be obtained through 4-H, I invite you to study the Klinger Family model. They personify the vision we hold for the growth and development of every family in America.

Vet uses acupuncture to cure animal ills

BY MONTIE TAK
Special Correspondent

CHESTER SPRINGS – Some people call her "the Acupuncture Lady."

Others may not realize she is a practicing veterinarian.

But Meredith L. Snader, V.M.D., combines the insights of both western and oriental approaches to medicine in her practice. She sees acupuncture as a valid and integral part of total veterinary care.

"Used properly, acupuncture can get very good results," says Dr. Snader. "But it is not a cure-all. You should have a complete veterinary analysis before acupuncture is used." She tells her clientele not to ignore conventional veterinary medicine and expect acupuncture to cure all the problems. "Use both," she says.

A native of Bala Cynwyd, she was graduated in 1973 from veterinary school at the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Snader's father is an allergist and many other family members are physicians. "But not horse physicians," she notes.

Acupuncture is a therapy developed by the ancient chinese using fine needles inserted at precise points on the body surface to stimulate those points.

"By stimulating the points you get a release of pain-relieving substances manufactured by the body, called endorphins," says Dr. Snader. She says acupuncture can also be used to stimulate the production of the hormone for milk letdown and to initiate the onset of labor.

One of her classmates, Dr. John Turnbull, uses acupuncture in Wisconsin where he has an extensive dairy practice. She also knows of a German veterinarian who uses acupuncture in the treatment of mastitis and milk fever.

Dr. Snader says acupuncture is not restricted to cows, humans and horses. The "barefoot doctors" of ancient China may have developed the technique to treat people for everything but they treated their animals, too. She has ancient charts of the pressure points the Chinese used on pigs, chickens and camels. And horses, too.

She says one of the oldest records of acupuncture use shows [illegible] acupuncture on their horses to prepare them for battle. But she also adds the Chinese had no charts for the treatment of dogs and cats because in their culture dogs and cats were kept strictly for culinary purposes.

Although her Chester Springs practice is "primarily equine," she treats some small as well as large animals. She has used acupuncture to treat dogs and cats by working out her own charts of the pressure points. And she knows of other cases where ducks, ferrets and raccoons have been successfully treated.

Dr. Snader first heard of acupuncture for animals when she received a flyer about a course being offered on the west coast. She was interested in the technique so when a similar course was offered in New York City about four years ago, she attended.

"It was more like an overview," she recalls. "But the possibilities just fascinated me. We could get the body to heal itself."

Strangely, the skeptics she has encountered are usually among her colleagues, not her clientele. She says the people who call her do so because they have seen acupuncture work or because they have heard of successful cases Sometimes she is called in when conventional methods of treatment have not effected the desired change in an animal's condition Dr. Snader calls this the court of last resort.

Even though she is sold on the benefits of acupuncture "because I have seen it work," she admits it is not a guaranteed cure. There are also factors that may account for variation in success. She says a previous high use of steroids to treat an animal may interfere with the results. And some individuals may not be able to manufacture as much pain-relieving substance as others.

During the last year, Dr. Snader has seen the growth of requests for acupuncture therapy until now acupuncture accounts for at least half her practice. There are other techniques she uses in addition to traditional acupuncture, such as using an electrical stimulator to speed treatment and injecting pressure point sites with B-12.

She also sometimes uses a laser, which serves to put energy into the cells. Raising the energy level of cells may cause up to 40 times the normal endorphin release but may not have as long-lasting an effect.

The apostle of acupuncture also preaches what she practices. Dr. Snader is the executive director of the International Veterinary Acupuncture Society, a non-profit organization striving to promote acupuncture as an integral part of professional animal care.

The acupuncture needles here are in place on either side of the ligament, below the stifle area.

Vet gets to point with acupuncture

By Montie Tak
Special Correspondent

CHESTER SPRINGS – "I consider myself typical of trainers who are always looking to new techniques and approaches to ease any pain a horse may endure," says Gary D. Reihart.

Reihart, a thoroughbred owner, trainer and breeder, is also vice president of the Pennsylvania Horse Breeders Association. He and his wife Beverly have 30 horses at their Dillsburg farm where they also stand their stallion Shining Sword, winner of $206,277 They have additional horses stabled by Penn National Race Course in Grantville where they race as Flying 'R' Stables.

He is also a firm believer in the benefits of acupuncture for horses

Reihart's interest in the healing technique began about 12 years ago when he saw a demonstration of acupuncture on television. "It amazed me so much," he recalls.

About ten years ago, Reihart sent an ailing race horse to a veterinarian named Dr. Cain in Cincinnati, who was the only one Reihart knew who was practicing acupuncture at the time. "He worked on Royal Cloak four of five weeks," says Reihart, "And the horse led his next race every step of the way "

Reihart was instrumental in introducing Meredith Snader to other trainers at Penn National. He was already convinced of the benefits of acupuncture when he asked Dr. Snader if she would come to the track on a regular basis if he could get her enough business. He says he introduced her to several trainers and each one signed on with her.

The trainer says acupuncture works because it helps get the positive energy flow back into an injured area. He dismisses skeptics – "Nobody can ever convince he you can talk a horse into a con game" – but says some people will run the legs right off a horse and expect acupuncture to work a miracle.

He continues, "If you use acupuncture as a therapy on race horses to keep them in tiptop shape, it will keep them in physical shape and what is more important, it keeps the mental attitude positive, so the horse wants to perform.

"If the horse doesn't want to perform, the trainer has a problem."

Veteran race horse groom Isom Rau-Ru would agree with that. He says, "What I found is a tremendous difference in a horse treated with acupuncture. Sometimes the response is unbelievable." But he also says he has seen other horses whose response was slight or nil.

Ru says type of injury and severity may be factors, as well as variations in the chemistry of the individual horse. "Some horses you need to take a little further Some might need a few treatments, others may need a series "

Reihart and Ru are ardent in their belief in Dr Snader's skills "She is definitely one of the best," says Ru. "She's serious about what she's doing."

"I am absolutely convinced this would work on any kind of animal," adds Reihart. "I would like to see this done on a cow that wasn't producing too good."

PX 9527 The Workhorse for Pennsylvania

PX 9527: Consistent performance and excellent standability.

Reserve some of your best ground for this high-yielding, mid to full-season hybrid. PX 9527 responds to top management practices, including early planting, 30-inch rows and higher plant populations. Good cold tolerance makes PX 9527 an excellent choice for reduced tillage acres, too.

PX 79: Favorite dual-purpose hybrid.

Ask corn growers in this part of the country what their most reliable hybrid has been over the years, and you're likely to hear "PX 79." Well-suited to a wide variety of field conditions, PX 79 also shows good resistance to diseases. A high-yielder for grain and silage.

PX 9581: Good choice for early planting.

See your Stanford Seed dealer!

These NK hybrids are available from your Stanford Seed dealer. He can show you how NK hybrids fit in your high-performance corn program for 1986.

NOTE: Seed performance can be affected by many factors beyond our control. The limitations of warranty and remedy on the label or tag of each bag of seed are conditions of sale.
